CAPTURED BY TRAMPS.

Railroad Train Run by Knights of Rest.

They Assault the Crew and Badly Beat a Brakeman—Six Arrests Made.

Celina, O., Feb. 1.—Excitement still continues over the capture of the fast freight Saturday night by tramps and the subsequent capture of seven of the criminals. After the capture it was found that four of the tramps had been wounded by pistol balls fired at them by the officers, though none seriously. While the officers were conveying the men to the jail cries from a number of the business men and others were made to "hang them." This excited them and they begged of the officers to protect them.

The woods in which the tramps who escaped took refuge were patrolled yesterday by bodies of armed men, and, as the county is highly wrought up over the outrage, the least resistance to the posse will mean death to the tramps.

R. F. Brownlie, station agent of the Lake Erie & Western railroad at this place, received a message from Conductor Reed, of a through freight at Fort Recovery, that a gang of tramps had possession of his train.

From Coldwater he sent another message that one of his brakemen had been badly beaten by them and that officers must meet the train.

Marshal Woods, accompanied by Constables Heffner and Solomon and a posse of men, met the train at the Mackinaw crossing. When the train slowed up three tramps were seen on the engine, while ten more were scattered from the engine to the caboose. They had full control and had been running the train wide open. As soon as they saw the crowd with the officers they began dropping off and taking to the woods. Six of them were captured and are now in the jail. The balance got away. The train crew tried to put them off at Fort Recovery, but they resisted and the crew was worsted, one of the trainmen being horribly beaten. He was taken to Lima for treatment.

On leaving Fort Recovery they took complete possession, and swore they would run the train to suit themselves, which they did. Conductor Reed will return to-morrow to appear against them, and as it is felony in this state to interfere with a train, the bums will no doubt get to learn a trade.

BACK INTO SERFDOM.

The Czar to Make an Important Move.

The Peasants to be Bound Out to Till the Soil and Then Have the Products Taken From Them.

Paris, Feb. 1.—According to advices from St. Petersburg the czar intends to initiate measures for the restoration of serfdom among the peasants.

Reports from many district officials have concurred in the statement that the increase of population in the villages is so great that the land belonging to the miers, or local communes, is insufficient to support all members.

The government, with the view of remedying the evil, proposes to allot to the peasants vast tracts of land under conditions similar to those of serf tenure.

One third of the harvest is to be stored in the communal magazines for the support of the peasants; one-third is to be sold by the government for the payment of local debts to the state, and one-third is to be retained for the payment of government taxes.

The peasants will not be allowed to move from their communes, but will be bound to the soil and will be obliged to fulfill their contracts with the state. The system will be first applied in the provinces of Samara and Saratoff, and if successful will be extended all over the empire. The execution of the new law will be entrusted to the district officials, "semski natchilniki."

STRUCK THE ROCKS

The Big Steamer Eider Ashore in a Fog

And Piled Up on the Isle of Wight.

Life Savers Making Desperate Efforts

To Rescue the Passengers and Crew.

The Scene of the Wreck is Where Her Majesty's Ship Eurydice Was Lost With Four Hundred People in 1878.

London, Feb. 1.—The steamship Eider, of the North German Lloyd Steamship company, Capt. Heinecke, which left New York for Bremen on January 23d, went ashore during the past night, on the Atherfield rocks, nine miles west of Ventnor, Isle of Wight. The Eider lies in a pretty comfortable position in close proximity to the coast guard station.

The coast guardsman noticed the fog whistle of a big steamship blowing during the night, but, as there are so many vessels passing up and down the channel, no danger was anticipated until suddenly rockets were seen to flare upward through the night mist and fog and then a steamships whistle was heard blowing the long uninterrupted note of distress.

The entire coast guard crew was immediately summoned and the neighboring stations were promptly notified to send reinforcements to the spot. The lifeboat of the coast guard station near Atherfield rocks was then manned and run out through the surf. By this time rocket after rocket was being sent up by the steamship in distress, thus guiding the coast guard lifeboat to the spot where she was ashore.

A tremendous sea was running as the life boat put to sea, and in addition it was bitterly cold, the wind freezing the water upon the life savers' boat, oars and oilskins. The sea was so heavy that as this dispatch is sent the life boat has not succeeded in reaching the steamship.

As the fog began to clear away early this morning the life boat was seen still gallantly struggling to reach the Eider, over which vessel the foam of heavy seas was breaking. It was believed, however, that the life savers will be able to rescue the crew and passengers, even if the steamship is unable to get off. It is impossible at this time to form any definite idea of the damage done, nor can the situation be more accurately summed up than to say the Eider is ashore on a dangerous coast, and that everything possible will be done to get her off.

The Eider passed to the right of the Isle of Wight instead of to the left of it, quite an important difference, it will be admitted.

Later.—As this cablegram is forwarded the gale is increasing in violence and heavy seas are continually breaking over the Eider. Several tugs and life boats from Ventnor, Yarmouth, Chale, St. Catherines and other places have managed to reach her and doing everything possible to assist the steamer; but her situation is becoming more critical every hour.

The tugs and lifeboats have managed to take off the mails and have landed them at Atherfield. From this fact, it is believed that the passengers are all safe.

The Eider is 2,950 tons and 5,200 horsepower. She was built at Glasgow in 1883 by John Elder & Co., and is considered in every way to be a first-class ocean passenger vessel. She has four decks, is bark-rigged and was last surveyed in February, 1891.

The spot where the Eider is ashore is not far from where in the autumn of 1878, on a calm Sunday afternoon, H. M. S. Eurydice, a British government training ship, while returning from a cruise in the Pacific and West Indies, capsized in a sudden squall, and drowned 400 men. The Eurydice, when the squall struck her, had her port holes open, on account of the fine weather and was so close to land, to use a seaman's phrase, that you "could chuck a biscuit ashore," yet nearly every one on board was drowned.

Particulars gathered during the day in regard to the stranding of the Eider show that she ran on the rocks at about 10 o'clock last night. At that hour the sea was calm but the fog was so thick that her officers were unable to see half the length of the ship's head.

The lead, and the steam whistle, were kept going and the engines were slowed down until the ship may be said to have been feeling her way towards the light she wanted to make before heading for the Solent and Southampton waters.

It was while hunting for the Needle's passage that the Eider, without any warning suddenly shook from stem to stern, and then with a long, terrible rasping, grating quiver, brought up on the Atherfield rocks, as already stated.

The suddenness with which the steamship ran ashore can be judged from the fact that the hand-lead was kept going on in the waist, while the patent lead was hove over her quarter, and that both reported plenty of water until almost the instant the steamship struck.

Assistance has been telegraphed for to all the neighboring points. Several powerful tugs have been dispatched from Southampton to the scene of the wreck and two of the most powerful government ocean tugs have been sent from Portsmouth by order of the admiralty authorities and have now reached the rocks in the midst of which the Eider is being slowly ground to destruction.

The lifeboats throughout the morning continued their gallant efforts to battle successfully with the wind, waves and rocks and at least one boat is now known to have managed to get alongside the imperilled steamer. The lifeboats are taking the greatest risks in their determination to approach the Eider, and are in constant danger of being stove in by the sharp pointed rocks, or, if they escape this danger, of being crushed to pieces alongside the vessel they are trying to assist.

When the coast guardsmen reached the Eider, they offered to take off the passengers, but Capt. Henecke declined to allow them to leave the ship, expressing himself confident of providing for their safety. By this time, the wind had increased so much that a most furious gale was raging, the wind blowing dead ashore and the sea rising every moment and breaking over the steamship, which is working badly on the rocks and increasing the size of the holes cut in her bottom.

The water was also rising in her hold in spite of the fact that the pumps were kept going continually.

Eventually the passengers became so alarmed and pleaded so earnestly with Capt. Heinecke to go ashore in the coast guard or other life boats that the Eider's commander consented to allow some of them to do so, and 13 of the passengers were safely landed in the life-boat, after passing through an experience among the waves off shore that they are not likely to forget for the remainder of their lives.

The lifeboat was tossed about like a cork, her passengers and crew were repeatedly lost to view from the ship and from the shore; but the lifeboat was so skilfully handled that the 13 passengers and the crew of the lifeboat were all safely landed.

Three more lifeboats, by the time the 13 passengers were landed, had made for the Eider and several tugs were also steaming up to her; but the latter were unable to approach near enough to her to be of any assistance, owing to the fact that the steamship was cradled in a spot surrounded on all sides by dangerous rocks which were so close together that even the lifeboats experienced the utmost difficulty in getting near enough to the distressed vessel to permit of passengers and mail bags being swung off into them.

As it was only 12 mail bags were got off at the time this message was sent, the previous information cabled to the effect that all the mails were saved having been based on erroneous information.

The Eider soon after signalled that the water was rising fast in her hold and appealed for more help. Everything possible is being done for her; more tugs and life boats are struggling to reach her, but the cruel rocks about her combined with the heavy sea and terrible wind prevent these crafts from reaching her and it is now feared the Eider is doomed to destruction and there will be serious loss of life unless the gale soon abates.

Upon her decks are gathered her terrified passengers and the crew, who, with the officers, are doing their utmost to maintain order among the steerage passengers, of whom there are about 200 on board. The cabin passengers are few in number according to report; indeed, it is said there are not more than 300 people all told on board.

The Eider's cargo consists of a large consignment of cotton for English and German manufacturers.

The steamship Eider left New York on January 23 at 9 o'clock. There were 20 first cabin and 25 second cabin passengers, 175 steerage, and about 70 in the crew. Capt. Henecke was in charge.

The vessel is 5,500 tons register and was considered one of the best vessels of the North German Lloyds fleet. The passengers were mostly Germans, Scandinavians and Danes returning to their native lands. As soon as the news of the disaster was posted on the bulletin board, numbers of friends and relatives of the people on board besieged the company's office on Bowling Green for information.

DISCOVERED IN TIME.

Attempt to Break Out of the Penitentiary.

Warden Dyer Was Given a Pointer By a Prisoner and the Delivery Was Frustrated.

Columbus, O., Feb. 1.—Warden Dyer frustrated the plans of 12 prisoners to escape from the Ohio penitentiary last night. The men had dug a tunnel to within 20 feet of the outer wall, in which they had placed several suits of citizens' clothes.

Wm. Walk, a burglar, was the ringleader. He has confessed, saying that he and his fellow prisoners were to have made a break for liberty at the first opportunity. It is believed that a foreman in one of the shops is implicated. A prisoner who had been offered a chance to go with the gang gave the plans away.

It is thought that Schaefer will take a European trip after his contest with Ives. He has said that he would play Roberts, the English champion, while abroad.

BOTH GIRLS INDICTED.

Murder in the First Degree is Charged.

More About the Sensational Memphis Case.

The Two Women Had Been Around the Levees, Dressed in Male Attire, Looking for Freda.

Memphis, Tenn., Feb. 1.—Yesterday was Miss Mitchell's and Miss Johnson's first Sunday in jail and for them it was eventful, inasmuch as crowds of people from 10 o'clock until 4 crushed through the corridors eager to see the young ladies.

At an early hour a Presbyterian preacher went to Mitchell's room and asked to pray for her, but the young lady does not put much faith in the efficacy of prayer. Miss Johnson being a Catholic, the preacher's offer to pray in her behalf was respectfully declined.

The crime was made the theme of a sermon by one of the local ministers. Other divines referred to it during their morning sermons. In the afternoon an evangelist went to the jail and preached to the prisoners almost in earshot of the young ladies, referring to Miss Mitchell as an awful example of what false ideas of right and wrong would drive people to do.

The state and the lawyers for Miss Mitchell hold opposite opinions as to the cause for the commission of the crime. The attorney general will attempt to show that Alice Mitchell either killed Freda Ward to avenge herself on Mrs. Ward's sister, Mrs. Valmer, or that there had been a misunderstanding between the slayer and her victim, and that Miss Mitchell, moved by hate, killed her.

One of the theories of the state is that there is a man in the case. The attorney general will prove her love for flirting by the recitation of several of her escapades, the principal of which is her meeting with several young men in an out of the way part of the city.

The state has several detectives at work, and they have already unearthed some damaging facts. One of these is that when Miss Mitchell slew Freda Ward a man was seen following Misses Mitchell and Johnson in a buggy. When Alice Mitchell leaped in the buggy after the commission of the crime this man drove rapidly away. On the following morning he left the city and has been tracked to New Orleans. It is thought that it was he to whom Miss Mitchell on Sunday night communicated her intention of killing Miss Ward.

The attorneys for Miss Mitchell will at once put in a plea of insanity. If Miss Mitchell be sent to the asylum, then Miss Johnson will have to fight for her life alone. Miss Johnson said Miss Mitchell kept her in ignorance as to her intentions, and when she left the buggy to cut the Ward girl's throat, she informed her that she intended to once more kiss Freda good-bye.

There is a young lawyer here who says that some time ago he received a letter from a young lady, inclosing a fee, and asking him if under the common law one woman might marry another. He was directed to mail his reply to a certain post-office address. He did as requested, and after the tragedy discovered that his client was Miss Mitchell.

The grand jury has indicted both girls for murder in the first degree.

The news of the action of the grand jury was speedily communicated to the accused by a friend. It was a great shock to Miss Johnson, as she anticipated nothing of the kind—in fact had hoped to be set at liberty.

She broke down for the first time since her arrest and wept freely. Miss Mitchell, on the contrary, was as cool as ever. She was prepared for the news, and it seemed to make no more impression upon her than if it had related to a stranger.

The counsel for Miss Mitchell will petition Judge Dubose for a jury to test the mental condition of their client on the plea of "Present insanity." This move, if it have the desired result, would forestall and prevent a trial on the indictment. Miss Johnson's lawyers will move for habeas corpus, with a view to having her admitted to bail.

It is understood that noted medical experts will be put on the stand at the trial, both by the state and the defense, to testify in regard to the mental problems and Psychological phenomena suggested in the nature of the case.

The indictment of Miss Johnson was also a surprise to the public, it having been generally believed that she was not concerned in the murder beyond the fact that she accompanied Miss Mitchell to the scene of the crime and remained in the buggy while the latter did the work.

But the developments of the last two days, which were fully detailed to the grand jury leave little room for wonder. First, there was the Spanish woman, Mrs. Mary Campbell, who overheard Miss Mitchell say to Miss Johnson, on jumping out of the buggy to chase the Ward girls: "Wait here till I fix her," and this coincides so fully with Miss Mitchell's exclamation, "I have done it" when she returned from the slaughter as to give strong color to the theory that she had told Miss Johnson what she intended doing.

But more damaging by far was certain other testimony which the "grapevine telegraph" says was given in the grand jury room.

This was to the effect that on Monday evening, a week before the murder, Misses Mitchell and Johnson boarded the steamer Ora Lee, dressed in men's clothes, and went all over the boat examining the register and closely inspecting the ladies' cabin. They remained on board until after 5 o'clock, the boat's hour for leaving. Freda Ward and her sister were on their way to take passage on the boat the next Monday evening, when they were followed and overtaken by Miss Mitchell.

They had intended going home by the boat the evening that Misses Mitchell and Johnson are said to have boarded it in disguise, but were persuaded by their hostess to remain another week.

This story is also in line with another report as to evidence given before the grand jury to the effect that Miss Johnson, as well as Miss Mitchell, had had a quarrel with the Wards

THE TROUBLE WITH CHILE.

The Administration's Latest Cable on the Subject.

The Apology Is Ample and There Will Be No Need to Resort to Arbitration.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The following is the text of the cable message sent by Secretary Blaine accepting Chile's proposition for settlement of the differences between the two governments:

"Department of State,
"Washington, Jan. 30, 1892.

"To Egan, Minister, Santiago:

"I am directed by the president to acknowledge the receipt of Senor Pereira's dispatch of the 25th inst. It has been communicated to congress and has given great pleasure to the people of the United States and to the executive department, as it restores the correspondence between the two republics to a basis of cordiality and makes, as he believes, a full and honorable adjustment of all unsettled matters easily attainable. The president notes with gratification the expressions of regret for and condemnation of the assault upon the sailors of the Baltimore, offered by Mr. Pereira, and congratulates the Chilean government upon the frank and ample withdrawal of the Matta circular and upon the spirit of justice displayed towards Minister Egan. You will assure the Chilean government that the president will be glad to meet, in the most generous spirit, these friendly overtures.

"Believing that the subject of reparation for assault upon the seamen of the Baltimore is now cabable of adjustment between the governments by the usual diplomatic methods, the president postpones for the present any discussion of the suggestions made by Senor Perreira as to the use of other methods, not doubting that the sense of justice of Chile will enable the two governments to speedily and honorably make full end of the whole matter. BLAINE."

STATE LIBRARIAN.

Joseph P. Smith Believed To Be Booked for the Position.

Columbus, O., Feb. 1.—It is now stated, on good authority, that Joseph P. Smith, editor of the Toledo Commercial, will be appointed state librarian by Gov. McKinley.

Mr. Smith was originally from Clermont county. For some time he conducted the Urbana Citizen, and for a few months has been occupying the editorial chair of the Toledo Commercial.

He was a candidate for the secretaryship of the republican state executive committee, but, on account of his earnest partisanship for Senator Sherman, it was thought best to select a more conservative man. During the recent senatorial fight he was one of Mr. Sherman's first lieutenants.

RIOTING IN EASTBOURNE.

Salvation Army the Object of Assault.

A Howling Mob Tries to Prevent the Soldiers from Celebrating an Interesting Event.

London, Feb. 1.—There was rioting in Eastbourne Sunday, caused by the Salvation Army holding a special celebration to commemorate the founding of the corps.

After the usual morning services the Salvationists marched through the streets under police protection, and were disturbed only by running comments and chaff from the crowds on the sidewalks.

In the afternoon, a drizzling rain that had been falling having ceased, a mob rapidly collected at the Salvation Army citadel and as the "soldiers" filed out singing their processional hymn they were subjected to more chaff, accompanied by the singing of a ribald parody, yelling and hooting.

A huge mob awaited the army at the sea front and with howls drowned the voices of the army lasses.

Directly the services began the mob swept upon the army shouting, "Throw them into the sea." The forces of the police were augmented and they behaved most creditably, resisting rush after rush, although overpowered by number.

The Salvationists were pelted with pebbles by their foes throughout the half hour they remained on the beach. When their services were seemingly ended, although not a word of it had been heard the members of the army commenced their return march.

Desperate hand to hand encounters with policemen continued. A few clergymen and soldiers were present, but held aloof. When the struggling crowd reached a point opposite the Burlington hotel, the police having come exhausted, another rally was made, and proved successful.

The hated flag was seized from its stalwart bearer and torn into shreds. Caps were torn from the heads of the Salvationists and tossed into the air or kicked into the roadway amid execrations. Some forlorn looking lasses who swooned from pain and fright were nearly trampled upon. The scene of violence was continued until the army retreated into their "citadel," and even then the mob was loth to disperse and still came into collision with the police. Several of the Salvationists are badly injured and the uniforms of all are spoiled.

BROTHER AND SISTER

Found Frozen to Death in Their Hut.

Christian Charity Came too Late to Render Them the Aid They So Greatly Needed.

Norwalk, Conn., Feb. 1.—On Thursday last neighbors entered the hut occupied as a home by Russell Ruscoe, aged 80, and his sister, known as "Aunt Maria," about the same age, with food for the old couple.

When they had entered the room the visitors found the old gentleman sitting upright in a chair dead. He had frozen to death. The sister was moving about the little room in a bewildered way as helpless as a child. She was put to bed and a fire built. The old man's body was prepared for burial and the visitors left. On Saturday neighbors again paid a visit to the hut and "Aunt Maria" was found frozen to death lying in her bed.

Both bodies were buried yesterday. The couple had long lived upon the charity of the neighborhood.

NO FEAR OF THE LAW.

A Bad State of Affairs in Georgia.

Burglars Continue Their Raids—Two Prominent People Murdered By the Marauders.

Savannah, Ga., Feb. 1.—There is considerable excitement here over two murders which have occurred within a week. One week ago August Meyer was shot and killed by burglars. Five men have been arrested for this murder.

At a mass meeting held after the murder a committee was appointed to wait upon Judge Tollicant to notify him of the discontent of citizens with the slowness of the court. The judge assured the committee that prompt measures would be taken to bring the culprits to justice.

Just after midnight last night Watchman Love, of the Commercial Guano works, was shot and killed, also by burglars.

This last crime is looked upon by the citizens as a challenge from the criminal elements and a law and order league is to be formed to meet it.

ENDED IN A FREE FIGHT.

New York, Feb. 1.—Joe Kent, of South Brooklyn, and Tom Ryan, of Williamsburg, fought three rounds yesterday afternoon in a resort near Stamford. At the end of the third round Kent refused to continue the fight, claiming that time had been called a minute too soon in the third round. There was a free fight among the 200 spectators when Referee "Kid" Hogan awarded the contest to Ryan. The fight was for a purse of $50. Each man weighed 135 pounds.

ARE TALKING BASE BALL.

Western League Committee in the City.

They Are Explaining to the Citizens the Excellent Plan on Which the New League Will Be Managed.

Messrs. Schmeltz and Evans, of Columbus, arrived in the city this morning as a committee from the Western league, to wake Toledo up from their slumber in base ball matters.

When the meeting was held in Chicago Mr. C. H. Morton was in attendance, at the request of Circuit Chairman McGuire.

Mr. Morton will manage Rochester this season, and was not in a position to state Toledo's wants in the base ball line, but on the representation that Toledo would doubtless enter, and also the desire to have Toledo enter, this city was considered preferable to Grand Rapids, and was given the franchise, and Toledo was placed on the board of directors.

It is for the purpose of seeing whether or not the people of this city care to go on in the new league or not that Messrs. Evans and Schmeltz are in the city to-day.

There have been numerous schemes advanced this winter, but until the present one none have merited indorsement by the Bee. The plan on which the Western league will be run is commendable and worthy of consideration.

Messrs. Schmeltz and Evans are to-day talking to the business men of the city, and a plan may be formulated by which Toledo can have a good club at a reasonable cost.

Grand Rapids stands ready to take the place of Toledo, but it is to be hoped that this city will not let this chance slip away, as it may not occur again in a number of years.

The Bee talked with a number of people this morning, and all were favorably impressed with the plan, but none seemed willing to take the lead.

The next few hours may, however, see things take definite shape.

A TOUGH CAT STORY.

Some weeks ago a family removed from Piedmont to Bismarck. Among other members of the family was the household cat. Tabby did not like the change, and for days after her arrival at Bismarck wandered around aimlessly, mewing pityfully at the cars as they passed. One day last week the boys at the depot noticed Tabby jumping on the trucks of the southbound freight train. The conductor and brakemen were told of their extra passenger, and resolved to watch her. At Hogan Tabby was still on the trucks; at Annapolis she was routed by the boys, but climbed on again before the train started; at Gad's Hill she was "fired" and chased into the brush, but again she made connections, and when the train reached Piedmont she left her seat with the air of a conquerer and trotted up town.—Ironton (Mo.) Truth.

BABY.

Where did you come from, baby dear?
Out of the everywhere into here.
Where did you get your eyes of blue?
Out of the skies as I passed through.
What makes your forehead smooth and high?
A soft hand stroked it as I went by.
What makes your cheek like a warm white rose?
I saw something better than any one knows.
Whence that flickering smile of bliss?
Three angels at once gave me a kiss.
Where did you get that coral ear?
God spake, and it came out to hear.
Where did you get those arms and hands?
Love made itself into bonds and bands.
Whence came your feet, dear little thing?
From the same box as the cherub's wings.
How did they all first come to you?
God thought about me, and so I grew.
But how did you come to us, you dear?
God thought about you, and so I am here.
—George Macdonald.

THE INTERNATIONAL BANK.

Bill for Its Incorporation Introduced Into the House.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 1.—Representative Bacon, of New York, has introduced a bill to carry into effect the recommendation of the international American conference by the incorporation of an international American bank.

The bill appoints C. N. Bliss, of New York; T. Jefferson Coolidge, of Massachusetts; Andrew Carnegie, of Pennsylvania; J. F. Hanson, of Georgia; Charles R. Flint, of New York; Enoch Pratt, of Maryland; S. O. Thomas, of California, and Charles H. Turner, of Missouri, commissioners to take subscriptions for stock.

The capital is fixed at $5,000,000, which may be increased to $25,000,000. Fifty thousand shares must be subscribed before the bank can be organized, and 25 per cent. paid down. There shall be 25 directors, of whom 15 shall be citizens of the United States.

As soon as 50,000 shares shall have been subscribed for, the subscribers shall become a body corporate, and shall have the usual powers of a bank of discount and deposit; but the bank shall not have the power to issue any form of circulating medium to be used in the United States.

Its principal office shall be in Washington or New York, and it may have eight branches in other cities in the United States and as many other branches in Mexico, South and Central America and the West Indies as the directors may determine.

It shall make the usual reports to the comptroller of the currency, and shall be subject to his examination.

A bill for a similar purpose was introduced in the last congress, and reported favorably by the committee on banking and currency, but failed to receive consideration at that time.

They were fined $5 and costs each for their disgraceful performance.

COUNCIL BUSINESS.

The board of councilmen meet this evening, and they will have before them a rather long and important schedule of business. Among the matters to come before them will be the ordinance to refund the gas trustees' certificates of indebtedness, an ordinance fixing the fire limits, an ordinance requesting the legislature to pass an enabling act to allow Toledo to issue $8,000 worth of bonds for harbor dredging purposes.

SAULSBURY AGAIN.

William Saulsbury and his family had another row last night, and a Sunday carousal was stopped by the police. Wm. Kloster and John Elbert were at Saulsbury's place on Adams street, near Franklin avenue, last night, and in some manner a row started and when the police arrived Saulsbury and his wife were covered with blood and William had a bad wound on the top of his head. In police court this morning the case was continued until to-morrow.

THE PASTORS' UNION.

The regular meeting of the Pastors' union was held this morning at the First congregational church. Rev. J. A. P. McGaw and Rev. S. G. Anderson gave interesting papers on the Dr. Briggs case and Confession of Faith. Dr. McGaw taking the conservative side of the subject and Mr. Anderson the liberal. An instructive and interesting discussion followed the papers. The next meeting will be held two weeks from to-day, Rev. A. J. Fish giving the paper, subject to be announced later.

THE REST DAY LEAGUE.

The executive committee of the Rest Day League met in the parlors of the First Congregational church at 2 o'clock to-day. A report was read by A. K. Wylie on the disposition of funds raised at the meetings. A motion was then presented and carried for a "publication (in leaflet form) of the state and municipal law for the state of Ohio in reference to Sabbath observance, so far as it has a bearing on the work of the league, said leaflets to be distributed among the business men of the city." It was agreed to request the pastors throughout the city to solicit membership and explain the Rest Day League from their pulpits the third Sunday in February. A meeting of the Rest Day League will be called for next Monday morning at 10 o'clock to act on resolutions, which have been prepared.

AN EXCELLENT THING.

Library to Be Formed for the Benefit of the People.

A consulting and reference library will be instituted in the parlors of the First Congregational church where clergy, Sunday school workers and everybody else may read at their pleasure. Weekly, quarterly and monthly publications, with the cream of general literature, the latest religious subjects, etc., can be consulted at any time, by any one, the project to be interdenominational. The only charge for this privilege will be to respect the properties and sanctities of the house of God."

Rev. D. M. Fisk delivered a sermon on "Our Cathedral Church and its Opportunity" yesterday morning, which gave an idea of the library and which resulted in the collection of quite a sum of money from the congregation for the purchase of books. The First Congregational church parlors were selected as a reading room on account of their being central, and as soon as the operation is in working order a hearty welcome will be extended to all who are interested. This is certainly a worthy plan for the consultation of the best reading matter and will help many whom it would tax to be obliged to purchase books necessary to their profession or work.

"Ashamed o' the Weather."

The Highlanders are loyal to Scottish genius. Sir Walter Scott, while making a tour of the western highlands, wrote to the innkeeper of Arroquhar, Loch Long, to have rooms prepared for him.

On the appointed day it rained ceaselessly. As Scott drew near the inn, he was met on the hill near the house by the landlord, who, with bared head and backing every yard as Scott advanced, thus addressed him:

"Gude guid us, Sir Walter! This is just awfu'! Sic a downpour! Was ever the like? I really beg your pardon! I'm sure it's no fault o' mine. I canna just think how it should happen to rain this way, just as you, o' a' the men of the warld, should come to see us. It looks amaist personal! I can only say, for my part, I'm just ashamed o' the weather!"

A traveler in central Australia has discovered that the surface of the country has been greatly changed by what may appear at first through a ridiculous agency—the white ants. On plain and in thickets their nests are so numerous that it is difficult to drive among them. The clay with which their nests are built is, when cemented with resinous matter, as hard as bricks, and when the nests fall to pieces they form clay flats almost impervious to water and not easily cut up by traffic.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. A Boston lady, whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten

I told him I had taken Hood's Sarsaparilla, knew what it was, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other. When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly

FOR TOLEDO'S HARBOR

Everything Looks Bright for an Appropriation—Talk With the Mayor.

Mayor Emmick arrived home from Washington this noon, Mr. Carrington went on through to Chicago, and Mr. Smith will be home to-morrow.

"What are Toledo's chances for a good appropriation?" a Bee asked Mayor Emmick this afternoon.

"I want to say, first of all, that Toledo has every reason to be proud of her representative—Congressman Haynes. It looks as if we were going to get a large appropriation, and if we do not get it it will not be through any fault of Mr. Haynes."

"How much did your committee ask for?"

"Well, $300,000, and while we may not get it all, we will get the greater part of it.

"We were before the committee twice and were well received. Mr. D. B. Smith was the chief spokesman, although we all did considerable work on the side."

"Did you get any promises from the committee?"

"Well, not exactly promises, but they were as near such as one could expect or desire."

THE AWFUL GRIP.

Don't Think You Have It, and You Probably Will Not.

It has been the concomitant history of every plague, and in a smaller degree of every epidemic, that very, very many whose records have swollen the list of sufferers, have added to the list of fatalities, have really in no wise been affected by the disease beyond the unlocated region of the imagination, writes Nathaniel Childs in the Boston Globe. No one of even slight observation can have failed to see how this fear of a disease is worked upon by overmuch reading and thinking about it.

Jerome K. Jerome, in one of his bright books, hits off this very common failing, in describing how many forms of disease took possession of himself while he was reading a work on family medical treatment. He was attacked by everything but the "housemaid's knee," a disease or affection which, not being carefully described, he was unable to catch. For now two successive years "la grippe" has exercised its—politeness to the sex leads one to speak in the neuter gender despite the feminine particle—baleful influence over many countries, and, miserably enough, right here at our own doors. When one is really attacked by "la grippe" he is quite apt to know it; but a bad cold, a rheumatic attack, anything uncomfortable, joined to the fear of "la grippe," can work almost as much harm as this many-sided misery itself. Probably no one can absolutely avoid "la grippe" by not being afraid of it; but unquestionably he can, by fear and worry, put himself in a capital condition to receive this unwholesome visitor, and make it quite "at home" in his system.

"The dread of evil is the worst of ill—
A tyrant, yet a rebel dragging down
The clear-eyed judgment."

Besides this fear, which grows and spreads with as various and broad a stride as any epidemic itself, there is a foolish habit which every one now seems to have fallen into of recounting symptoms. Let one but mention the possession of a pain in any part of the human system, or any unpleasant bodily sensation, and forthwith some over-kind neighbor hastens to shout at him: "You'd better be careful; that's the way 'the grip' begins," and from such assertions it is evident that "la grippe" has as many ways of beginning as the tardy boy has excuses for being late at school. Instead of saying that one has a cold, a headache, a toothache, or bad corns, we raise the fear of "la grippe" (that happening to be the prevalent epidemic) by suggesting it.

"You rub the sore
When you should bring the plaster."

as the immortal bard says.

This playing upon a single string—and that very much out of tune—makes very poor music. How much better hundreds who have been, who are, or who may be ill, would have fared if that confounded feminine term for the world-wide influenza had never been coined may easily be considered. And it will be as good advice as any specialist can offer, to suggest a careful avoidance of the term in conversation, unless it becomes absolutely necessary. A large percentage of the cases of "la grippe" will never materialize, if the name be not mentioned or the disease suggested by its title. La grippe is like Fate—its name is ill-omened, and had better not be alluded to in conversation before its approach or presence.

For a disordered liver try Beecham's Pills.

A COLUMN OF SMILES

an indefinite time, have no consciousness of monotony, can do without exercise, are impervious to noise, can go to sleep at any time and in an attitude—all because they have no nerves. He cannot help taking things as they come. Curiously enough this indifference is not associated with want of energy, for the Chinaman is exceptionally industrious. He is simply insensible to worry.

No Chance for Gossip.

By the parlor lamp:

She—Read me something from your paper.

He—Certainly, my love. Here's something that will interest you. "Rumored Engagement."

She—How lovely! Wonder if I know them!

He (continuing)—"Fourteen killed on the Mexican frontier."

Jumped at a Chance of Relief.

"Is it true, Miss Gertie," he said, "that there are just two things a woman will jump at—a conclusion and a mouse?"

"No," she answered. "There is a third, Mr. Philip."

After thinking the matter over a few moments he tremblingly made her an offer, but she didn't jump at it. He was not the right man.—Chicago Tribune.

Worse Than Death.

A group of men stood about an individual who had been pulled out of the river just as he was going down for the third time.

"Give him some whisky," said one.

A murmur came from the nearly drowned man. Some one put his ear down and listened. He said:

"Roll me over first and get some of this water out. It'll weaken the liquor."—Atlanta Constitution.

And It Was Very Late When He Did Go.

'Twas 11 o'clock. He had started to go,
And his hat he nervously fingered,
And they stood in the hall—Mary Jane and her beau,
And he lingered, and lingered, and lingered.

And he lingered, and lingered, and lingered, and lingered,
And lingered, and lingered, and lingered,
And lingered, and lingered, and lingered, and lingered,
While his hat he nervously fingered.
—Chicago Tribune.

The Acoustics Marvelous.

Among the good stories that are drifting up and down the Rialto there is one of an impecunious star who recently came back to New York "to reorganize." While playing a week stand in the South shortly before his return to upper Broadway sundry trades people to whom he was indebted for varying sums conceived the idea that he intended to execute a pacific slope and leave them nothing but a tender memory. In this belief they swore out warrants charging him with the same, and two gallus constables went to the theater to apprehend the star. They found him alone upon the stage waiting for his company to turn up for a rehearsal, and with a smile of triumph they gathered him in. He sat down at the prompter's table to write a notice informing the players that the rehearsal was off, and a conversation sprang up.

"It's a nice theater you've got here," remarked the Thespian to the men of law; "one of the finest I have ever played in."

"I reckon it is," chorused the constables, "it cost a heap of money, sah."

"The acoustics are simply marvelous."

"What are them?"

"Hearing properties. You have only to speak in a whisper on this stage to be heard all over the house."

"Sho', is that hones'?"

"I'll prove it. Now stand here at the foot of the lights, and I'll go up here, almost to the back wall. I'm only speaking in a whisper, but you hear me plainly, don't you?"

"Yes, sah."

"Now I'm standing against the wall. Do you hear me now?"

"Yes, sah."

"Quite plainly!"

"Puffec'ly!"

"Then good morning!"

There was a flash of actor and a bang from the stage door. They never caught him. After vainly endeavoring to give one of the two remaining performances without their star, the company followed him home on their trunks.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Selling Out.

"I thought you advertised that you were selling out at cost,' growled the customer, throwing down the required 25 cents for a small package of notepaper.

"Yes, sir," replied the stationer briskly. "That's right. We referred to our postage stamps. Want any?"

Columbus or ——?

An Ohio schoolmistress vouches for the following as a faithful copy of a boy's composition on Columbus. Some of the writer's historical statements are a little "mixed," but our readres will not need to have the errors pointed out.

Columbus was a great patriotic. he was born in Genoa, Italy. It is undoubtedly known what year. but I think it was Friday. October 12, 1435.

Columbus was the youngest of his five brothers, and so one day he concluded that he would go out and see if he couldn't do something for his country.

He went to Brooklyn, New York, and walked the streets until he was tired and hungry. he then went to a baker shop and bought him two three-cent loafs of bread, he ate one going along the street and the other he put in a red handkerchief and put it in his pocket, a lady seeing him laughed at him and made fun of him. finally he became so smart and intelligent that she married him.

Thoughtful.

When a brave man finds himself preserved from sudden danger, his first thought is of companions in peril.

On the coast of Wales a life-saving crew put out to a wreck. The night was dark, and a tremendous sea was running. Presently the boat was capsized, and all the men were thrown out except one, who was fast under one of the seats.

He righted himself as the others clambered in again, and his first words were: "Is there any one drowned besides me?"

Under the direction of the Legislature of Ohio, the State Food and Dairy Commissioner, Gen. S. H. HURST, examined the leading brands of baking powder (30 in all) and the following is Gen. HURST'S verdict:

"Cleveland's Superior is absolutely the best baking powder manufactured."

THE OVERMAN TRIAL.

It Will Commence in Cleveland Wednesday.

The Make-up of the Court and the Manner in Which the Trial Will Proceed.

Cleveland, Feb. 1.—The trial of Major L. C. Overman, of the United States engineer corps, by court-martial, on the charge of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, will be commenced in the club room of the Hollenden on Wednesday.

The result will be anxiously awaited, not only by the members of the engineer corps, but by those engaged in other branches of the service. This will be the third court-martial which has occurred in the engineer corps for more than thirty years.

Colonel Blunt, ho was in charge at Buffalo, was tried some years ago on the charge of criminal carelessness. The officers of the corps are not directly responsible to a commanding officer, but make their reports to headquarters at Washington.

Major Blunt's offense consisted in allowing his clerks to do their work without proper supervision, and his trial followed. The other court-martial was that of Major Harbecker, at Washington. His offense was similar to that of Colonel Blunt. This is the first time that a criminal charge has been made against an officer of the corps and for that reason unusual interest is manifested in the coming trial.

The court appointed to try Major Overman will be composed of four members of the corps of engineers and nine officers from the military arm of the service. Captain John R. Myrick, of the Third Artillery, who is stationed at Fort McHenry, Baltimore, will be the judge advocate of the trial and will prosecute the case in the name of the government.

The details of the court-martial is as follows:

Col. Robert E. A. Crofton, of the Fourteenth infantry; Col. Orlando M. Poe, of the corps of engineers; Lieut.-Col. Samuel Ovenshine, of the Fifteenth infantry; Lieut.-Col. Charles E. Wikoff, of the Nineteenth infantry; Maj. Amos Stickney, of the corps of engineers; Maj. Wm. Ludlow, of the corps of engineers; Maj. Ezra B. Kirk, quartermaster; Charles E. L. B. Davis, of the corps of engineers; Maj. Clarence M. Bailey, of the Fifteenth infantry; Capt. Emerson H. Liscum, of the Nineteenth infantry; Capt. Stephen Baker, of the Sixth infantry; Capt. Jacob F. Munson, of the Sixth infantry; and Capt. Wm. H. Crowell, of the Sixth infantry.

This will be the first court-martial ever held in Cleveland, and a brief description of how it will be conducted may prove interesting. The court, as stated, will be composed of 13 members exclusive of the judge advocate, who is in reality the prosecuting attorney.

In accordance with a law which America has inherited from England, the court will be in session from 10 until 3 o'clock, and any business transacted outside of these hours will be illegal. It is said that when this law was framed it was thought that 10 o'clock was early enough to commence business, and that in accordance with the customs then in vogue, the members of the court would be unable to transact business after 3 o'clock.

ROPED IN THE FARMERS.

A Clever Swindler at Work in Ohio.

He Bought Horses, Paid in Bogus Checks, and Borrowed Good Money on the Strength Of It.

Lima, O., Feb. 1.—A sleek confidence man has reaped a rich harvest in this locality during the past 10 days. He appeared in an entirely new role, and is undoubtedly victimizing the gullible in other parts of the state. He stated his name was P. J. Wolf, and that he was buying horses for the Cincinnati market. He said his money was deposited in the Exchange bank, of Columbus Grove, and it was his intention to make a shipment today. Mr. Rader, who is one of the leading farmers of the county, was the first man approached, and he supposed the man was what he represented, and not only took him in, but spent two or three days taking him around and introducing him to other parties. During this time he purchased a number of horses, to be delivered at Columbus Grove to-day, and gave a check for each on the bank.

With each transaction he invariably succeeded in getting a loan from the unsuspecting farmer. Their loans amounted from $10 to $50, and were readily advanced. He visited a number of places, among them Isaac Shiffle's. He bargained for a fine horse, and gave his check for the same. He also contracted with Mr. Rader for a young horse, and engaged Mr. Rader to go with him to Cincinnati with the horses. To show that there was nothing small about him, he not only made out the check for the price of the horse, but also included expenses for the time Mr. Rader had spent with him, and the railroad fare to Cincinnati and return, and added to those 80 cents to pay for having the animal shod in front. There was nothing but what he was willing to do as long as he could pay for the same by giving a check.

Tuesday morning he and Mr. Rader started for the city in a buggy. On the way to the city he stopped at Farmer Shiffle's to see about the horse he had purchased and before leaving he had succeeded in borrowing $20. When they reached a saloon he proposed to stop for a drink. After leaving the place he said to Mr. Rader: "I'll walk down town and meet you at the First National bank at 10 o'clock."

Mr. Rader waited at the bank until 12 o'clock and Wolf failed to appear. A score or more farmers took their animals to Columbus Grove and were dumfounded when they learned that Wolf was unknown, had no account or acquaintance at the bank and was a fraud of the first water. He has fled for unknown parts. His profits in this vicinity will reach several hundred dollars.

BLEW HIS HEAD OFF.

Lima, O., Feb. 1.—A force of men are at work on the new grade being made for the Pittsburg, Ft. Wayne & Chicago road, and the ground is frozen so hard that dynamite is used to break the ground.

Wilson Mullenour bought 20 pounds of dynamite and took the explosive out to where the work was being done, and had used all of it but about five pounds, which he had all ready to touch off, when it suddenly exploded, tearing his head from his body and frightfully disfiguring him and hurling his head high into the air.

FRIGHTENED TO DEATH.

San Antonio, Tex., Feb. 1.—Mrs. Emma Scheffer, of this city, was frightened to death late last night by a tramp, who entered her room unexpectedly by forcing open the door. The unfortunate woman was nursing a child at the time. Her husband was lying sick in the same room. Before he could reach his wife she had given a dying gasp, and the tramp gazed horror-stricken into the face of the dead woman a moment and then fled.

IN COLORADO STYLE.

Two Gamblers Object to Being Arrested.

They Load Up With Fire Arms and Go Gunning for a Man Who Killed One of Them.

Denver, Col., Feb. 1.—A startling tragedy occurred at La Junta, Col., yesterday, in which Lew Winters was shot and instantly killed by A. C. Hickman.

The tragedy grew out of a raid on a gambling den last Thursday, which subsequent events have proven was being run by Ed and Lew Winters.

When the place was raided by the police under the leadership of City Marshal Lewis, the two Winters boys were placed under arrest, and after being heavily fined were released from custody.

They imputed the cause of their arrest to Hickman, and swore an information against Hickman and two others for participating in the gambling.

This was a cause for the exchange of some bitter words. It is alleged that both the Winters boys sent Hickman word that they intended to kill him on sight.

Friday evening about 7 o'clock Hickman and both the boys met on the street, and a few angry words ended in a resort to six-shooters.

Both the Winters fired simultaneously, missing Hickman, but filling his face full of powder, almost blinding him. The shots were returned, but without effect. The participants were promptly placed under arrest, but were released on bonds.

Yesterday morning Hickman started for a barber shop, taking his Winchester. As he entered the door of Kenyon's barber shop, Lew Winters, who was in the shop, started for the oath room, at the same time pulling his gun.

Hickman immediately raised his Winchester and fired and Winters fell, the ball having passed through his heart. Hickman is still at large. An inquest will be held over the dead Winters to-day.

NO BAIL FOR GRAVES.

Denver, Col., Feb. 1.—The granting of a supersedeas in the Graves case does not mean that Graves will be admitted to bail, as has been claimed. He will be allowed all the time his attorneys consider necessary to further prepare his case. Attorneys for the defense are jubilant and are confident of ultimately securing their client's acquittal. It is the general belief that if a new trial is granted it will be impossible to secure another conviction.

FIGHTING FOR OLD GLORY.

Sensational Scene at Bridgeport Saturday.

A British Vessel Refuses to Send Up the Stars and Stripes and May Get Into Trouble on Account of It.

Bridgeport, Conn., Feb. 1.—Shortly after 12 o'clock Saturday afternoon the big three-masted schooner Glendon, of St. John, N. B., sailed into this harbor with the British jack floating from her mizzen. In direct violation of the United States law which provides that a foreign ensign must always be accompanied by the stars and stripes, the fore and main masts were destitute of bunting.

As the vessel sailed up the harbor the British flag was perceived by the people on the docks and as the vessel passed the three bridges the abutments were black with excited men who greeted the British flag with hisses mingled with cries of "haul it down" and "shoot it."

Capt. Trowbridge of the schooner drew a pistol and swore he would shoot the first man who laid hands on the halyards. When the vessel finally reached her berth at Sword's wharf, which is just in the rear of the Fourth regiment armory, there were over 1,000 men on the wharf.

They were joined by 75 unarmed militia men from the armory, who attempted to tear down the flag.

They were driven off at the revolver's muzzle by the crew. An American flag was then hoisted on an adjoining schooner amid great cheering. The British flag still floats, but will be forcibly removed.

THE WAY TO GO.

You have seen California frequently mentioned in newspapers and magazines. Perhaps a friend has been there and writes enthusiastic letters back home about the climate and the fruits. It makes you anxious to see the country for yourself.

The time to go is in the fall and winter. Then work here is least pressing and California climate is most pleasing. The way to go is via Santa Fe route, on one of that line's popular, personally-conducted parties, leaving Chicago every Saturday evening and leaving Kansas City every Sunday morning.

Special agents and porters in attendance. Pullman tourist sleepers are used, furnished with bedding, mattresses, toilet articles, etc. Second-class tickets honored. Write to Geo. E. Gilman, Michigan Passenger Agent Santa Fe route, for folder describing these excursions.

AMAZING SUPERSTITION.

St. Petersburg, Feb. 1.—The peasants of Riazau have been taught to believe that Tolstoi is anti-Christ, that to accept his bounty means the loss of their souls, and that all thus accepting will be stamped with the mark of the Beast on their left hand.

This amazing superstition is attributed to the prejudice of the Greek Russian clergy.

LYNCHERS ARRESTED.

Houston, Tex., Feb. 1.—Three of the four men who lynched John Shields near Timpson are under arrest here, and have been fully identified by an aunt of Shields, who witnessed the affair unknown to the lynchers. The fourth man will probably be arrested soon. Shields was heir to some property, and it is believed he was killed on that account.

A BATTLE TO DEATH.

A Saloon Brawl Ends in Murder.

Man and Wife and a Mastiff Pitted Against Three of the Patrons.

Green Bay, Wis., Feb. 1.—A sensational shooting affray took place here Saturday night in which Charles View was shot dead and Joseph Brunette and Adam View, two companions, were seriously wounded by Martin Van Lannon, a saloonkeeper.

The three men began the fight by jumping on Van Lannon when he insisted on pay for drinks they had ordered. Mrs. Van Lannon and the saloonkeeper's huge mastiff came to the rescue, and for a time the result of the fight was problematical.

One of the men finally killed the dog with a bung starter, and Van Lannon and his wife fled to their home which adjoins the saloon, closely followed by the trio. The fight was kept up in the house.

Van Lannon ran to his bed room, seized his revolver and turned on his pursuers. At the first shot Charles View, who was leading the attack, fell dead with a bullet through his heart. His companions turned to flee, but before they could make their escape Brunette was shot three times through the body and one ball lodged in Adam View's body. Brunette will probably die.

WANT A RECEIVER.

Urbana, O., Feb. 1.—The United States Rolling Stock Works' troubles continue to multiply. An application for a receiver was made by Ramsey Maxwell and Ramsey, of Cincinnati, representing Henry D. Laughlin, W. H. Fenner, Jr., Thos. A. Griffin, John Caldwell, William McConney, plaintiffs, asking for the appointment of a receiver. Judge Geiger granted the application and named Adolfo Hegewisch, president of the company, as receiver. He gave bond in the sum of $25,000.

Columbus, Feb. 1.—Gov. McKinley is much improved, but will not take up public duties again for some days.

CAPTURED THE CAMP.

Vigorous Action by Working Men.

Union Men Take Steps to Enforce the Demand for Better Wages In Montana.

Butte, Mont., Feb. 1.—Twenty-five hundred union workingmen attacked the railroad camp of Messrs. Foley Bros. & Guthrie, of St. Paul, yesterday, and took prisoners 100 railroad workmen from St. Paul. The road is a branch of the Great Northern and the contractors are only paying $2 per day, while the union wages in Butte are $3 for that kind of work.

The trouble has been pending a week, but the contractors would not consent to raise wages to the union scale. By a preconcerted plan union men from all over the city moved to the railroad camp and took all the men prisoners, without a blow being struck or any property being destroyed.

The men were taken to the city and given rooms at a hotel and were required to join the Butte Workingmen's union. It is likely the leaders of the movement will be arrested.

Paris, Feb. 1.—The Spanish minister, the Duc de Mandas, has formally and officially entered a protest, on behalf of the Spanish government, against the insinuations of bad faith against the Spanish minister, in regard to the commercial treaty negotiations, which are attributed to M. Ribot, the French minister of foreign affairs.

It is rumored in this connection that should the French government decline to explain satisfactorily or disavow the alleged utterances of M. Ribot that the Spanish minister will leave Paris on an indefinite leave of absence and that diplomatic relations between Spain and France will be severed.

The answer of the French government is awaited with considerable anxiety in diplomatic circles for it is admitted that the European situation is such that any serious trouble between France and Spain will, necessarily, involve other countries in the dispute and that this may cause a rupture of peace in Europe.

The gravity of the situation can hardly be exaggerated, especially in view of the fact that it is now generally admitted that the key to the peace of Europe is in the possession of Spain and that internal troubles in that country are such as to cause much uneasiness.

TO THE CITIZENS OF TOLEDO.

The late strike by Bakers' union, No. 66, of this city, was not for wages or time. It was simply a question whether the proprietor of the bakery or the workingmen should buy the goods. Certain members of the union have gone throughout the city requesting the citizens not to purchase my goods for the reason that I am and will hereafter run my bakery to suit myself. The strike by Union No. 66 was useless, as has been proven by papers signed by the secretary of the state of New York, showing that they were too hasty in their move to compel the bakers to succumb to them. Thanking the citizens for past favors, I wish to say that Brenzinger will always be found at his old stand, 608 Adams street, and his bread and cakes will be found at the groceries all over the city.

Very respectfully,
W. F. BRENZINGER,
Model Vienna Bakery, 608 Adams st.

TO BURN THE PALACE.

Incendiaries Discovered in Koenigsberg.

Berlin, Feb. 1.—An attempt was made on Sunday to fire the royal castle of Koenigsberg. The incendiary got access to the main floor, poured petroleum over one of the floors and set fire to it.

Smoke and flames burst from the tower, and for a time there was a lively scare, the whole town turning out to witness the conflagration.

The fire, however, was gotten under control before it had done much damage.

The incendiary made good his escape and no clue has been found to him up to the present.

ANOTHER FACTORY

That Will Soon be Built in Toledo

For the Manufacture of Several Articles for Use on Railroad Cars.

Toledo is to have another factory, and one that will be a credit to the city. Outside capitalists have lately interested themselves in certain inventions, one of which is a contrivance for lubricating car axles, and another of which is a dust guard for car axles.

Patents on these inventions were granted last week, and a company will be immediately organized with a capital of $500,000 for their manufacture. The gentlemen interested have selected Toledo as the place for their factory on account of its excellent location as a great railroad center, and the other advantages possessed as a manufacturing point.

The plans for the factory will be completed at once, and it is expected that work will be commenced on the buildings within the next 90 days. The site has not yet been selected.

Mr. S. Canfield, of this city, represents the company, and states that the capital is all from out of the city. He also says that the articles which they are to manufacture have all be thoroughly tested on several railroads with much success, and he considers it a good thing.

TWO MORE UNIONS

To Be Added to the List of Toledo Labor Organizations.

At Carpenter's hall yesterday afternoon, under the auspices of the Central Labor union, the preliminary steps were taken for the organization of two more unions in this city. The trades represented were the coopers and the boiler makers.

Temporary organizations were effected in both cases, and the formal application for charters under the American Federation of Labor were made out. These have been forwarded to-day, and as soon as the charters are received the unions will be regularly organized and will elect delegates to the Central Labor union.

The Bakers' Trouble.

The situation in the bakers' trouble is about the same as on Saturday. All the bakeries, except Seyfang's and Brenzinger's, are employing union men, and it is said Seyfang will put union men to work this evening. At the meeting of the Central Labor union yesterday a committee of three for each ward was appointed to assist the bakers in their strike on these two shops, and resolutions were drawn up endorsing the action of the union men in refusing to go to work in the shops where the men who had left the union were employed.

The strike committee was in session in Druid hall this morning, receiving reports from the ward committees. A number of groceries and small bakeries have already agreed to give their custom in bread, cake and pie buying only to those shops which have agreed to employ only union men.

The Saturday night meeting of the stationary engineers in Turley's hall was well attended. This question was debated: "Which affords the most power—belt or direct engine connections?" and the judges decided in favor of direct engine connections. The question of scientific setting of boilers was discussed, and continued to the next meeting. At the next meeting another question for discussion will be "What are the relative heating qualities of gas, coal and oil fuel?"

A full and interesting meeting of L. A. 3031 was held in Rensch's hall on Saturday evening. One feature of the meeting was the drawing of an order on the treasury for $100, for the benefit of the deceased brother whose funeral occurred on Wednesday afternoon, January 20.

MAHER AND FITZSIMMONS.

New York, Feb. 1.—Peter Maher, the Irish champion, and his manager, Billy Madden, have gone to East Hampton, L. I., at which place Maher will train for his coming fight with Bob Fitzsimmons. Madden had thought of going south for the training of his man, but finally concluded to remain in this part of the country rather than take chances on the climate in Galveston.

No Vacancy.

It is not true that "The tailor makes the gentleman," but it is true that a gentleman cannot safely neglect the tailor's services, if he wishes people in general to take him for what he is. A man prominent in Canadian political life was somewhat too careless in this respect.

This statesman was once on his way to call upon a well known gentleman in Quebec, and stopped an Irishman on the street to inquire the way.

"Can you tell me where Mr. Hunter lives?" said the statesman.

"It's no use your going there," was the unexpected reply.

"But do you know where he lives?"

"Faith, and I do; but it's no use going there."

The inquirer began to get angry.

"I didn't ask your advice. I simply want to know where Mr. Hunter lives."

"Oh, well, he lives down that street yonder, the first house round the corner; but I tell you it's no use your going there, for I've just been there myself, and he's already got a man."

Mr. Hunter had advertised for a servant the day before, and the statesman, so the story goes, went at once and bought a new hat.

The bodies of several British seamen who had died of cholera in the harbor of Bombay were taken out to sea and buried, and it is supposed the sharks contracted the disease by feasting on the bodies of the human victims.

Speaker Reed's tactics bid fair to be imitated in the New York assembly. No republican should protest.

Secretary Blaine may have to turn his reciprocity scheme in the direction of countries with which we have interdependent relations or "drop it" altogether.

The flint glass employes in Pittsburg, who have been out on a strike, have returned to work, having gained their point. A deal of trouble there is for workingmen who are "protected" by a high tariff tax.

It begins to look as if the deep waterways of the chain of lakes and rivers from mid-country to the sea were about to receive some attention at the hands of congress. Aside from the benefits involved it is refreshing to see some measure before the law makers that tends to material advantage rather than party emolument. The delegates made a good beginning Saturday.

A state convention in Pennsylvania will nominate a candidate for justice of the supreme court. Among the delegates to the convention selected in Philadelphia are three appraisers who were indicted for complicity in the Bardsley frauds. And yet a wonder is expressed at the growing suspicion of the people of this country that its courts are corrupt. Can a stream rise higher than its source?

As a means of "rapprochement" it is suggested by an Italian resident in New York, that Italy should join her countrymen in the metropolis, in the expense and glory of presenting a statue of Columbus to New York City, the jubilee year of the fair. If New York ever gets a monument in honor of anybody it will be by some such manipulation, but the Italo-American rapprochement adviser should be admonished that the commercial city of the Atlantic sea-board is not "the country." Still, we wouldn't discourage the idea of the benefit. Perhaps, in accord with the same sentiment, Chile will help New York to build a monument to Gen. Grant one of these days.

Looks like the finale of the Chilean row in Washington would be a brush between the president and his secretary of state, managed by the newspapers and the friends of the officers lined. The Washington Post demands, when the settlement at home comes, that the country be informed "how it happened that Santiago received its first information as to the president's ultimatum from the commercial house of W. R. Grace & Co., and twenty-two days before the note was actually issued?" and "who has been juggling with the destinies of two nations, nursing delay, engendering bitterness, bringing us face to face with perilous tragedy, and trailing over the whole chapter the smirch of a mercenary influence?"

This has a somewhat imperative business sound, and the aim of the shot cannot be mistaken.

Four subjects have been proposed by General Master Workman Powderly for discussion in the local assemblies of Knights of Labor. They are:

First—The restriction of Chinese immigration.

Second—The election of United States senators by popular vote of the people.

Third—The investigation of the matter relating to the condition of the working people in cities of not less than 200,000 population.

Fourth—The repeal of the present tariff laws.

The first of these is proposed on account of the near expiration of the present restriction act on Chinese immigration, which act the knights were instrumental in having enacted, and which they think should be renewed. The others are natural and legitimate subjects for consideration in an organization which claims to seek all industrial reforms through legislative enactment.

The pall seems to have settled on London in very deed. Spurgeon is dead. His long struggle with disease is ended at last and the peace and rest no earthly stress can break follow the weary months of pain. His familiar figure on the streets and his voice of power in the pulpit will be missed for many a day, but the good work of which he was father and promoter will be carried forward by willing hands trained in his own school. Twenty thousand persons are on his church roll of membership, and thousands have thronged the door of his great tabernacle unable to obtain entrance, Sunday after Sunday. Thirty-six chapels in London are the direct outgrowth of his central work. His published sermons fill about twenty volumes and he has published a number of books besides these and for a quarter of a century has edited a journal called The Sword and Trowel. From a tract distributor to the most famous pulpiteer in the world (Henry Ward Beecher alone disputing with him this distinction) is the history of his life in briefest line.

President Harrison's words about the gerrymander, echoed by Gov. McKinley were uttered simply for the sake of sound. This is very well understood. The Ohio legislature gives no more heed than a base ball crowd would to a Salvation army hymn. Specials from republican correspondents in Columbus, to republican newspapers say it isn't necessary to give particulars of the bill agreed upon; suffice it to say there will be fifteen sure republican districts to six democrats, and that "no uncertain issues will affect these districts when created, from sending a republican delegation to congress during the next decade. This is the main consideration. The republicans are masters of the situation and the democracy can appeal the case to the people as they please."

Rather large talk from a very small source. It's a way the democracy have, to "appeal the case to the people as they please" and the people are still "masters of the situation," as this braggart crowd has been several times forcibly reminded. These big assertions of ownership in defiance of the people simply make the bumptious asserters ridiculous in the eyes of decent, sober-minded citizens. Forraker was downed but the political spirit that pertains to him and his methods is still rampant in his party. Threat and bluster will serve them, collectively, as it has served him individually.

The pastor of the First M. E. Church in Wheeling, W. Va., has been deposed by the bishop, because he told the young people of the church that he believed dancing was a natural and harmless amusement and in accordance with his belief he arranged for it, as he said, "in proper fashion and within proper limit." Now the deposed will form a church of his own and the young members will all go with him into banishment. And yet there are those who wonder why fun-loving and frolicsome young persons do not gravitate towards the church in greater numbers.

The Pittsburg Post accepts the verdict of the jury in the Quay libel case with philosophy, judging by the following editorial utterance: "An honest man has always been supposed to be the work of God, and a noble work, too, but now it seems to be the work of a jury."

After the fire-eaters of the South American republic are made to promise they will salute our flag, won't the president insist that if Minister Montt is likely to remain in command of affairs he shall quit spelling his name "Jorge?" We'll get into bad habits through its frequent occurrence.

The Pittsburg Dispatch having grumbled a little concerning Chicago's "lucky" star, because that city has secured both the world's fair and the democratic convention, the New York Herald is generous enough and just enough to say, "It is not luck, but pluck."

There is nothing specially striking about the headline in an eastern exchange, "Irish Differences May Be Settled." Of course they may; that has always been true. But will they be? That is another and a different question.

A strange and ominous rumbling in the earth is frightening the Kalamazooans. The Chicago Times suggests that it is the Alger boom vainly trying to make its way out of Michigan.

Dr. Lyman Abbott is a daring theologian. He not only abolishes the old fashioned hell, but he gently says he considers that the Eve of Genesis is a mythical creation.

THE PRESS VISITORS.

Gossip With and About Our Guests During Their Brief Stay.

Miss Parloa, of cooking school fame, said: "We have had many elegant receptions, but Toledo gives us a welcome home." Miss Young, of the Salt Lake Tribune, said: "I have put it down in my note book, not only the hospitality of Toledo, but the elegant appearance of her ladies and gentlemen; especially have I underscored the tasteful toilets of the ladies. We have seen more showy costumes in many cities of the west, but not the refined fashion." Mr. Kennan, of the Pittsburg Press went through the Bee office in search of pointers for the new building his paper is about to erect. He expressed himself as pleased with every arrangement, and was "also glad to notice that women in the middle west had gotten beyond society and fashion work alone, in the newspaper field. They were in advance of their sisters in the extreme east and extreme west." He said he employed women to every extent at present possible and found them always faithful and capable. Mr. Davis, also a Pittsburg journalist, said the newspaper fraternity was "his crowd." Miss Chamberlain, of the Boston Transcript, said: "I shall tell those who did not come with us that the best view to get of the city is from the balcony and windows of the new Bee building." Mr. Berri, of the Brooklyn Standard-Union, said "the trip taken in its entirety was an event of a life-time, and the only way to get a realizing sense of the breadth and expanse of the country was to travel from sea to sea." Foster Coates chatted of the new building that his paper, the Mail and Express, was about to build on Broadway, and assured an anxious inquirer that Col. Shepard selected the Scripture texts all himself. San Jose and Santa Cruz were two California cities that were spoken of with enthusiasm. Col. Berri said: "Redlands," in San Bernardino county, had his vote as being the gem spot of the universe. The new ideas gathered by the fraternity in their westward-to-the-sea journey will brighten many printed columns hereafter.

HAD A CLOSE CALL.

Coal Gas Brings a Family Near to Death's Door.

The members of the Bullman family on Willard street, were very nearly asphyxiated by coal gas.

Early this morning Mrs. Bullman managed to bestir herself enough to realize that she was rapidly succumbing to some hidden power. With one gigantic effort she roused herself and sprang out of bed, when she fell to the floor in a swoon.

Her husband, Mr. Frank Bullman, was suffering from the same suffocating sensation, and Mrs. Bullman's sudden move served to arouse him from the lethargy into which he had fallen. He leaped out of bed and threw the doors wide open. He then carried his wife into the air, and returned for a child, which was also under the influence of the terrible gaseous odor. He found his mother, an aged lady, gasping for breath, and it was with great difficulty that she was revived. The old lady is suffering with consumption, and the gas came near proving fatal in her case. The gas was emitted from a coal stove connected with an imperfect draft. The family at the latest account had recovered to a great extent.

COST $20,000.

St. Paul, Minn., Feb. 1.—The Northern Pacific railroad has settled with all members of the Andrews Opera company who were injured in the accident at Brainerd recently, and with the money thus secured the company expects to reorganize and take the road within three weeks. The amount paid by the railroad company will reach, it is said, about $20,000. Florence Joy is in a critical condition, and it is thought she cannot recover.

AGAINST THE CONSOLIDATED.

Another Suit in Common Pleas Court for Personal Injury.

In common pleas court to-day William Harvey by his attorney, James H. Southard, entered suit against the Consolidated Street Railway company to recover $5,000 damages for personal injury. Harvey alleges that on January 9, 1892, he was driving a coal wagon on St. Clair street. On the corner of St. Clair and Lafayette streets an electric car ran into his wagon knocking him off into the street, dislocating his shoulder and otherwise seriously injuring him.

THE GHOST WON'T WALK.

The Sheriff's Force Will Not Shake Hands with Him This Month.

Sheriff Stuart to-day paid to the county auditor $123.88, receipts of the sheriff's office for the month of January. Out of this the sheriff and his deputies' salaries, amounting to over $500, must be paid. It is very probable that the ghost won't walk at the sheriff's office this month.

Want to Annex to Toledo.

While the re-districting bill introduced in the house by our member, Hon. J. W. WORKMAN'S BILL.

The Betterment of the School System Under Discussion.

Columbus, O., Feb. 1.—The office of the state commissioner of schools was the meeting place of the legislative committee of the State Teachers' association Saturday, called for the purpose of passing upon the proposed measure introduced by Mr. Workman, of Hardin county, for the betterment of the school system.

The bill abolishes local directors in subschool districts and provides for the appointment of township boards of education. This board is to be made up of the township clerk and one local director from each subdistrict. This board is to be given entire control of the education in the township which they represent, and shall have the power to employ teachers and perform other duties. The bill was discussed, clause by clause, and unanimously adopted. A set of resolutions were drawn up indorsing the measure fully, and the same were ordered transmitted to the legislature.

Those who were present at the gathering were F. Trendley, Youngstown; O. T. Corson, Cambridge; Alston Ellis, Hamilton; J. C. Hartzler, Newark; J. B. Mohler, Gallipolis; J. H. Shawan, Columbus; H. W. YOUNG DESPERADOES

Make Things Somewhat Exciting About the Stock Yards.

Charles Gleason and Frank Shelly, two young tramps, were arraigned in police court this morning on charges of petit larceny and assault and battery.

Saturday morning these fellows entered the office of the Union elevator, and Shelly took an overcoat belonging to Mr. Wm. J. Parks. Just then Mr. Parks and another gentleman discovered them, and the fellows ran, Shelly dropping the coat.

Mr. Parks caught Shelly and had him down, but Gleason then attacked Parks with a knife and rescued his comrade. Fortunately, however, he did not injure Parks beyond a scratch on the face. An exciting chase then took place, and finally the two fellows were captured. On the charge of petit larceny the fellows were fined $50 and costs and 30 days each, and Gleason was fined $50 and costs and four months for assault and battery.

FARMER ROBBED

By Fellows Who Pretended To Be Officers of the Law.

A farmer named John Hyte, was conducting a little celebration of his own at Perrysburg a week ago Sunday, and while somewhat intoxicated, made a display of his money in Mrs. Artz' saloon.

When he left the place he was followed by three fellows named Henry Killer, Wm. Rhody and Wm. Artz. Outside the saloon Keller represented himself as an officer and pretended to place Hyte under arrest. The three fellows walked Hyte out of town and then robbed him of his money, some $34. Keller and Rhody were afterwards arrested and Artz was caught in this city Saturday evening and sent back to Perrysburg.

THREE-STORY BUILDING

To Go Up on the Corner of Jefferson and Water Streets.

The project for a new three-story building on the corner of Water and Jefferson streets, which was mentioned last spring, is still in hand by the owners of the property and Mr. J. C. Woodruff, of Cincinnati, who owns the site, is in the city to-day, and has with him a new plan for the building.

This building will be on the property now occupied by the old St. John warehouse and will be used for steamboat landing, passenger rooms, offices and a warehouse. It will not be erected, however, until after the close of this season's navigation.

DEAD IN A BATH TUB.

A Father Leaves the Supper Table to Commit Suicide.

Montreal, Feb. 1.—Thomas Bell, living at 204 Versailles street, last evening left the supper table while the balance of the family were still eating. He went to a bath room in an upper story and locked himself in. He then laid down in the bath tub and cut his throat from ear to ear.

Sometime after his 10-year-old daughter discovered Bell and fainted at the sight. The noise of her fall brought the remainder of the family to the scene. No reason can be given for the act.

SPURGEON IS DEAD.

The Great London Preacher Called Home.

He Yields Up His Life After a Long and Painful Battle With Disease

London, Feb. 1.—A dispatch from Mentone announces the death of the Rev. Charles H. Spurgeon at 11:05 last night.

Mr. Spurgeon's end was painless. He remained unconscious to the last. His wife, Dr. Fitz-Henry, and Miss Thorne were present when he died.

At all the services held yesterday in the Metropolitan tabernacle, of which Mr. Spurgeon was pastor, the auditorium was packed. Rev. Mr. Pierson and others offered earnest prayers at these services and read to the congregation telegraphic bulletins from Mentone.

The morning papers contain long memoirs and obituary articles on Mr. Spurgeon. The Chronicle appears with a mourning border. It compares the dead pastor with Martin Luther.

The Telegraph characterizes him as a great, fearless, and faithful minister. It adds: "Albeit of homely genius and eloquence, all agree that he leaves a void that will be filled with difficulty."

Rev. Charles Haddon Spurgeon was born on June 18, 1834, in Kelvedon, Essex. He received an ordinary education under strong religious influences, and became very early an usher in a school at Nottingham, in which humble capacity he developed astonishing powers of public speaking, and was especially effective in religious exhortation.

His relatives, who were independents, offered to have him trained for the ministry, but he declined because he held Baptist views. Later he relinquished these and joined the church formerly presided over by Robert Hall at Cambridge.

He became a village preacher at Traversham and soon after became pastor of the Baptist chapel at Waterbeach. At this period, only 17 years old, he delivered a series of discourses which attracted immense crowds and spread his fame through England, and even America, as the "boy preacher."

Having been offered the chapel in New Park street, Southwark, he preached for the first time in London in 1853, with such success that the edifice had to be enlarged to accommodate the rapidly growing congregation. At Exeter hall, which was occupied during these alterations, hundreds were turned away every Sunday, being unable to get within the doors.

The enlarged chapel in Newpark street proved insufficient and the Surry Music hall was hired to accommodate the overflow. Finally the Metropolitan Tabernacle was built, which holds four or five thousand people, and there the famous preacher has remained to this day.

Since 1853 his sermons have been published weekly and sold throughout the Protestant world in increasing numbers. In 1887 Mr. Spurgeon severed his connection with the Baptist Union because it tolerated heretical views on the subject of hell. This gave rise to a long controversy. In 1888 was celebrated the delivery of his two thousandth sermon. The pastors' college, the Colportage association, the book fund, and the supplementary pastors' aid fund were all founded by Mr. Spurgeon in support of his work at the tabernacle. In his illness, which began seven months ago, and passing through many vicissitudes, he has had world-wide sympathy, and his devoted congregation have been untiring in their petitions to the Lord for his recovery.

Mr. Spurgeon's body will be taken to England for burial. Mrs. Spurgeon is bearing her affliction bravely. Mr. Spurgeon took a little milk during Saturday night, but early Sunday morning it was evident that there was no hope. Once or twice he just recognized his wife. After 10 a. m. he took no food, and gradually sank. His friends had been confident he would recover because his last attack was milder than the previous one, but the gout reached his head, and congestion of the kidneys returned. Between his attacks of suffering on Saturday he was able to speak, and expressed himself as anxious to send a message to his congregation. He thought constantly of his wife.

THE OHIO YACHT CLUB.

Probability That All Past Differences

Will Be Healed Up To-Night—Resignations and Settlements Generally on the Tapis.

The special meeting of the O. Y. C. to be held this evening promises to be one of the most important ever held by the club. The strife that has existed within the ranks of the organization for three weeks has arrived at a point where all difficulties will be amicably adjusted and the storm weathered, or the helm will be deserted and the staunch old ship left to the mercy of the squall, to be dashed to pieces on the rocks of dissension.

Commodore Bills, Vice Commodore Tracy, Secretary Gunckel and several of the directors have filed their resignations, to be acted upon to-night. One of the officials, who is in position to talk facts, informed a Bee this morning that this was the final step towards a peaceable settlement, and that Mr. Ketcham would consent this evening to withdraw all suits in court, and lend his hand and influence to pull the old craft into peaceful waters once more.

The resignation of the officials will most probably be accepted, and just what will follow the officials themselves are at a loss to even conjecture. Some are of the opinion that a fight will be made on the acceptance of the resignations of the commodore and secretary, who will insist that they be permitted to step down and out.

Tewfik Pasha, the late khedive of Egypt, had but one wife, and the notices in the dispatches of his harem refer to the companions and servants of his wife. In this respect he set his subjects an example that is said to have done much toward the uplifting of Arab women. The Khedive's widow is a short, portly woman, good-natured, and rather good-looking, but of somewhat limited education.

THE GIFT.

I.

Life came to me and spoke;
"A palace for thee I have built
Wherein to take thy pleasure;
I have filled it with priceless treasure;
Seven days shalt thou dwell therein,
Thy joy shall be keener than sin,
Without the stain of guilt—
Enter the door of oak!"

II.

I entered the oaken door;
Within, no ray of light,
I saw no golden store,
My heart stood still with fright;
To curse life was I fain;
Then one unseen before
Laid in my own her hand,
And said: "Come, thou, and know
This is the House of Woe—
I am Life's sister, Pain."

III.

Through many a breathless way
In dark, on dizzying height,
She led me through the day
And into the dreadful night;
My soul was sore distressed
And wildly I longed for rest—
Till a chamber met my sight,
Far off, and hid, and still,
With diamonds all bedight
And every precious thing;
Not even a god might will
More beauty there to bring.

IV.

Then spoke Life's sister, Pain:
"Here thou as a king shalt reign,
Here shalt thou take thy pleasure,
This is the priceless treasure,
The chamber of thy delight
Through endless day and night;
Rejoice, this is the end;
Thou hast found the heart of a friend."

Cyclones are of tropical origin, and are chiefly found in five localities, the West Indies, Bengal Bay, and the Chinese coast, north of the equator, and in the South Indian ocean, off Madagascar, and the South Pacific, near Samoa. In the Antilles there are not half a dozen on an average every season.

Men who have done deeds of any worth seldom continue to live down in the valley. They come up on the hill and let themselves be known, and who can blame them? Thomas Laws, the negro boy who bore the message from Miss Rebecca Wright to General Sheridan which induced Sheridan to attack the confederate army at Winchester, has been found. He lives in Philadelphia.

Napoleon is still a name to conjure with in Paris. Col. Soufflot, once in the armies of Napoleon, celebrated the one hundredth anniversary of his birth in Paris a few days ago. In honor of the event he was made a commander of the Legion of Honor. As long ago as 1813 Col. Soufflot received the cross of the legion. He became an officer of the great society in 1843. Despite his great age, he is still said to be comparatively healthy.

A Victoria, B. C., Chinaman recently married "a Melican woman." But he soon wanted a divorce. In his plea he complains that she has "too muchee talkee with neighbors, too muchee paint face and eye-blows, too muchee Yulepean blandy, too muchee fight, too muchee snore, too muchee boss, too muchee dleam, too muchee say kiliam husband, and too muchee no good." But the court held the Chinaman to his contract.

"Siwash" is the common name for the Indians in Vancouver's Island and in neighboring British possessions. It is nothing more than a corruption of the French "sauvage," the name given to the Indians by early French settlers in the northwest. The Indians, on their part, have adopted and curiously corrupted English words and phrases. With one tribe the ordinary form of salutation sounds something like "Clackawawa," and it has been traced to the fact that the Indians hanging about a military post were accustomed to hear the soldiers salute a post trader named Clark with "Clark, how are you?" which phrase the Indians adopted and corrupted.

DELIGHTED WITH TOLEDO

The Press League Delegates Praise The Future Great.

Something of the Trip Across the Continent.

Toledoans in the Sunny Clime of California—Romance of San Diego —Incidents of the Tour.

The delegates of the League of Press Clubs were more than pleased with the reception tendered them by Toledo.

"I like the reception better than any we have received," said ex-President Keenan, as he bade the Bee good-bye. "I like it because it totally lacks that taint of shrewd advertising that seemed to be the main motive of so many of our receptions."

"I am very sorry to part with so kindly a people," said Mr. Wilde, "but I promise you that I will not soon forget the generous reception we have received here."

"Good-bye," said Mrs. Leslie-Wilde, extending her hand, "and I will say that nowhere have I so thoroughly appreciated the kindness of a people as here in Toledo."

Mr. Keeler, of the Boston Herald, Mr. Alexander, of the Transcript, and many others were equally emphatic in their expressions of praise for the Future Great.

In California.

The contrast between going to sleep amid 12 feet of snow in the Sierra Nevadas and waking up among sunshine, flowers and orange groves of lovely Auburn had much to do, no doubt, with forming our first favorable impressions of California. The whole-hearted hospitality of the people, however, confirmed these impressions so thoroughly that it was unanimously voted that, climate aside, the golden hearts well entitled the state to the appropriate name of Golden. From the moment of entering to the hour of leaving the state, ours was one round of festivities. In San Francisco we were given the freedom of the city, and Chief of Police Crowley joined the police judge in granting immunity to the visiting newspaper men for such misdemeanors as might be committed by them while the guests of the city.

We saw the city by daylight and gaslight, and there was nothing worth seeing from a swell blow-out among the 400 of Boston Hill to a fan tan game in the dives of Chinatown that we did not see. The three days' trip to Monterey, Hotel del Monte, San Jose, Pala Alto farm, where we saw the famous trotter and several score of his kindred, Stanford university and a memorable 56-mile stage trip to Mt. Hamilton and the Lick observatory and the famous big trees was an outing that will not soon be forgotten. Our southward trip was even more interesting. At Sacramento, Fresno, Pasadena, Los Angeles, Redlands, San Bernardino, Riverside and San Diego, the citizens turned out en masse. At San Bernardino the Toledo delegates received warm greeting from Wm. Reginald Ream, formerly of the Blade, and Billy Mitchem, formerly of the Wabash, Toledo. Mr. Walker, son of City Auditor Walker, and "Polly" Knapp, both Toledo boys, are also located there. At San Diego we met Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Isherwood, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Scott and Mr. Robert Hamilton, all of whom speak in unmeasured terms of praise of California in general and San Diego in particular.

M. A. Scott to His Friends.

Mr. Scott sends the following to his Toledo friends:

I have been here in San Diego two months at the Florence hotel, and a more lovely location cannot be found in the city. The house with the numerous guests (some 150) from all parts of the north and east are social and agreeable. In this beautiful climate they all feel as though they escaped the rigid winter and are thankful they are here. We are visited to-day by part of the press club, and I am happy to say two representatives of the press, Messrs. Murphy of the Bee and P. C. Boyle of the Commercial called at the Florence and are delighted with San Diego and with the reception they received.

Mr. F. P. Isherwood.

Mr. Isherwood penned the following lines:

M. A. Scott and wife we found at the Florence in San Diego. They have been prowling extensively about the states, and like the climates of all, though preferring San Diego for its warmth and velvety tone. While giving the palm to Pasadena for beauty of scenery, drives and homes; Riverside for oranges and a pleasant reception from Mr. B. B. Barny and wife, formerly of Toledo. Mr. Barny has probably the finest small grove in the state and is justly very proud of it, and has been well repaid in health and pocket by leaving the Future Great. An especial feature are the good hotels, their reasonable prices and the fine restaurants in all the principal centers. In fact Lower California seeems made up of a few centers; the balance being desert—except where water can be found to irrigate. The Hotel Green at Pasadena and the Arlington at Riverside are hotels that no one can afford to miss.

Mr. W. W. Griffith, of Toledo, is spending the winter at Pomona; also Mr. Swigart, of the Mansfield Bridge Co., of Toledo. Mr. S. has a ranch near Pomona and spends his winters in California.

Romance of San Diego.

Amid the cheers of the most hospitable people in the world, the Press league special pulled out of the crowded depot at San Diego for her point of destination in the east. The old Spanish city by the sea has many interesting memories for the student of history, and in the immediate vicinity the young and sentimentally inclined find scenes of many an interesting romance.

While the majority of the visiting news gatherers are paying their respects to Rear Admiral Brown, of the United States man-of-war San Francisco, which rides gracefully at anchor in the bay near by, and others are tasting the delicacies of that queen of hotels, the Coronado, a few of us charter a carriage and start for what is known as old town, but which is, in fact, San Diego proper. Well indeed were we repaid for our visit. After inspecting the old mission and the famous bell which still calls the faithful to worship as it did 200 years ago, we turn our steps to a little adobe cottage made famous by Helen Hunt Jackson's story of Ramona. It was in this adobe that Ramona was married to her Indian lover. From the home of Ramona we returned to the old cemetery near by. The gate is locked, but we mount the adobe wall which separates it from the main road, and soon stand within the sacred precincts of God's half acre. The moss covered headstones have fallen into decay, but near the entrance stands one still intact which attracts the attention of the inquisitive stranger. The inscription, still plain and distinct, informs the visitor that beneath lies the dust of Senora Adele Josephine DeCassidy, aged 21.

The old sexton who has approached us unawares shakes his gray locks as we turn to him for an explanation. The story connected with the young woman's life is almost as romantic, and perhaps as interesting as that so charmingly told by "H. H." Years ago an enterprising buccaneer named Cassidy entered the port of San Diego after booty. The owner and lord of that section of territory now known as San Diego, was a certain Spanish don whose name the old sexton could not remember.

The tale as told us by the old Spaniard, is much too lengthy for an article of this nature. It will suffice to say that loving and beloved the pirate in attempting to elope with the fair Senora was overtaken and killed by the irate Don. The girl upon being apprised of the fact swallowed a dose of poison and joined her disembodied lover on the other side of the dark river.

We walked half a mile in the broiling sun to visit the house wherein the foolish girl swallowed that drink of death.

It may be the story is simply an exaggeration of the many fairy tales with which our California friends have been delighting us ever since our advent among them yet it is given for what it is worth.

Gorham's Jester.

Marshall P. Wilder, who added not a little to the enjoyment of the press league outing, occupies a unique position in New York society. He is not in the true sense of the word a humorist but is rather a jester whose quaint stories so inimitably told with grotesque gesture and facial expressions helps to amuse Ward McAlister's 400 in Gotham. He is regularly employed to attend dinners given at certain swell mansions in New York and receives an annual stipend for these services anywhere from $500 to $2,000.

He divides his seasons between New York and London and receives remuneration for his service of about $14,000 per year. Speaking with the Bee representative he said "a New York gentleman who is generally said to be the most penurious of New York's great millionaires gives me $2,000 per year, not for any service rendered him, but for attending charitable institutions of New York. The letters of thanks which I receive from these institutions I send him and they are the only vouchers for the $2,000 a year given me."

"You also write a weekly syndicate letter?"

"Yes," but I do not profess to be a humorous writer like Nye or Mark Twain or Nasby, but I do write a letter which seems to catch the public."

"I should think it would require considerable tact to know just what to say and how to say it before the various audience which you address?"

"Yes, it does. I have some three hundred sketches and several thousand stories. The sketches are 20 minutes each, and the stories from two to five, I am also somewhat of a ventriloquist and an adept at ledger-de-main. I never touch on religious or political subjects, and I wish to say most empatically that I never go into the dirt for a laugh."

The small, quaint figure gains him the immediate sympathy of an audience, and as he is an excellent conversationalist, his presence at a dinner often relieves what might otherwise be a very weary and dreary hour.

The Train and Lines Traversed.

The train is the finest equipped that ever pulled out of New York. There was nothing lacking that is to be found at a first-class hotel. From the dining car to the smoker everything was complete, and the Wagner Palace Car company, to which the league is indebted for the free ride, gave an excellent illustration of how a palace on wheels can be furnished and equipped. Mr. J. C. Yager, eastern superintendent of the Wagner Palace Car company, and Mr. W. B. Jerome, of the New York Central, accompanied the train on the entire trip, and it is putting it mildly when it is said that to these gentlemen is due in a very great degree the pleasantness of the tour. On the run between St. Louis and Toledo Messrs. Yager and Jerome were presented with a handsome tribute of silverware. Mr. E. L. Cornell, the presiding genius of the dining car, and Conductor Morrison were also remembered.

The route traversed was 8,676 miles, and was the longest distance made by a single train of cars. The route and pilots were as follows, and from the list it will be readily seen that the most beautiful and picturesque part of the western country was traversed.

New York Central and Michigan Central, New York to Chicago, W. B. Jerome and M. C. Roach.

Chicago & Northwestern, Chicago to Omaha, James Gibson and E. S. Andrews.

Union Pacific, Omaha to Denver, D. E. Burley.

Denver & Rio Grand and Rio Grande & Western, C. C. Smith and C. K. Huber.

Denver to Ogden.

Southern Pacific—Ogden to San Francisco, San Francisco to Los Angeles.

Southern California (now A. T. & S. F. R. R.)—Los Angeles to Pasadena and return, K. Morrow.

San Bernardino to San Diego, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, Edward Burnett.

San Diego to Kansas City, making stops as follows: Albuquerque, Santa Fe and Las Vegas Hot Springs.

Wabash railroad—Kansas City to Toledo.

Michigan Central railway—Toledo to Buffalo.

New York Central railroad—Buffalo to New York.

Besides the lines and gentlemen above named the delegates are under special obligations to Messrs. Wade and Gregory, of the Southern California railroad, and to the Wabash officials who accompanied the train from Kansas City.

It Was Mentioned on the Train.

That Yager and Jerome are a great pair to draw to.

That Albaugh, of Canton, holds a great hand in an emergency.

That "the sword of Bunker Hill" is harmless when sheathed.

That J. Seaver Page, of New York, is the Chauncey Depew of the contingent.

That M. H. DeYoung and wife accompanied the party on their eastbound trip.

That A. E. Pearsall, of the New York Advertiser, was the singer of the delegation.

That Mrs. Frank Leslie's husband, Mr. Wilde, is an excellent after-dinner speaker.

That Geo. F. Lyon, of New York, is a worker of Tammany hall and a mighty shrewd politician.

That the Cleveland Women's Press club had an excellent representative in Mrs. Elroy M. Avery.

That W. N. Penney, of the New York contingent, represented the United Press. He is a hustler!

That E. L. Cornell, the presiding genius of the dining car, is the right man in the right place.

That at Los Angeles, Mr. Spense, a prominent banker, entertained the Ohio delegation right royally.

That L. E. Bancroft, of the Pittsburg Dispatch, made more mashes than any other delegate on the train.

That Geo. H. Welshons, of the Pittsburg Times, left the delegation at San Diego and returned north.

That Eugene J. Fleury, of the Buffalo Express, has a weakness for hearts and can play a good hand of pedro.

That Irving Watson, of Rhode Island, kept a diary. He proposes buying out Los Angelos one of these fine days.

That Julius Schmahl, of the St. Paul Press club, worked hard to secure the next convention for his city, and got it.

That Major T. P. McElrath, of New York, was unanimously elected historian of the convention. He has undertaken a big task.

That Irving Watson, of the Narraganset Herald, has got more facts and figures for his paper than all the other delegates combined.

That Thomas H. Evans, of the New York delegation, is a former Toledo boy, he having worked on the Commercial eight years ago.

That Miss Kate Field has been the shining celebrity of the trip. She is an excellent speaker, and one of the best newspaper workers in the country.

That T. K. Albaugh, representing the Canton Press club, was accompanied by his mother, Mrs. Judge Albaugh. T. K. is a hustling newspaper man.

That Wm. C. Grout of the Boston Herald and Wm. B. Alexander of the Transcript have reputations of being the best newspaper men in Boston.

That Sam C. Austin is taking home with him to New York a various assortment of souvenirs, including a Mormon, an Indian, a mule and a bull-dog.

That the Western Union Telegraph company very kindly volunteered to deadhead all social messages from delegates to their friends in the east.

That John Stillman, of the Baltimore American, representing the Journalistic club of Baltimore, never takes a back seat but manages to sit with the driver.

That it was a happy idea of Managing Editor Williams of the Examiner to furnish delegates a daily grist of local news from the cities whence the visitors hailed.

That the thanks of the entire delegation are due to Mr. W. B. Jerome, of the New York Central. He accompanied the party on the round trip, and was the life of the train.

That Miss Mattison met with a somewhat serious mishap at Fresno. She fell from the top of a tally-ho and escaped with no worse damage than a blackened eye.

That the Pittsburg Commercial-Gazette is ably represented by Wm. H. Davis. W. H., by the way, can sing a good song, or tell a good story when the occasion demands it.

That Mr. T. J. Keenan, of Pittsburg, deserves and receives the thanks of the entire delegation. He had charge of the itinerary and it was no easy task to carry it through.

That J. C. Yager, the hustling superintendent of the Wagner Palace Car company, accompanied the train on its entire trip, and left nothing undone to make it pleasant.

That Marshall P. Wilder was a much sought for celebrity. The prosperity of his jokes lies not so much in the ear of the hearer as in the facial expression and gestures of the teller.

That Charles W. Price, the secretary of the league, is connected with the New York Electrical Review. Next to Mr. Keenan he has been the principal worker for the interests of the league.

That Byron R. Newton, of the Buffalo News, is the poet laureate of the train. He is in receipt of a complimentary letter from Mr. Sutro for his excellent poem on "The Seals of Sutro Heights."

That Mrs. Lulu S. Upham, of the Boston Gazette, represented the New England's Women's Press association, and through her influence Mrs. Sallie Joy White was elected on the governing board.

That of the Boston delegation G. C. Morse, of the Herald, and Wm. B. Smart, of the Post, were the active workers, while J. S. Keeler and E. J. Carpenter looked after the interest of the ladies.

That Thomas J. Keenan, ex-president of the league and a member of the governing board, has done much more than any one man to make the league a success. He is proprietor of the Pittsburg Press and one of the ablest newspaper men of the country.

That Ohio people are to be found all over Southern California. At San Bernardino the Bee was greeted by Billy Mitchem, formerly of the Wabash, Toledo; Polly Knapp, formerly of the Lake Shore freight office, and by Mr. Walker, son of City Auditor Walker.

WHAT PERSEVERANCE AND PLUCK CAN ACCOMPLISH.

Inspection of the American Branch of the Largest and Most Prosperous Business of Its Kind in the World.

(Special Correspondence of the N. Y. Press.)

Rochester, N. Y., Jan. 26.—A visit to Rochester is considered incomplete unless it includes, among the various sights of this thriving city, an inspection of the mammoth eight-story fire-proof building, which contains the largest institution of its kind in the world. As I was determined, if possible, to see all of interest in this city, I yesterday called at the office of this great company, presented my card and was soon in the presence of a man whose name is perhaps better known the world over than that of any other American. That man is Hon. H. H. Warner.

It is, perhaps, a delicate matter to ask of any gentleman an inspection of his premises and business, especially when they are so mammoth as this, but I found Mr. Warner a most genial gentleman, and the result was that he personally consented to accompany me through the institution. It was bewildering at first, so many departments, so many men, so many girls, and all working as fast as possible, while mechanical inventions and contrivances of all sorts replaced manual labor wherever possible.

As we passed rapidly on from one department to another the chief thing that struck me was the exceeding cleanliness of each and every department—cleanliness where the great vessels hold the medicine in course of preparation; cleanliness where it is thrown off and bottled by an automatic filler, that cuts off the supply when the bottle is full; cleanliness where the bottles are corked and labeled; cleanliness where they are boxed, and finally where the boxes take a clean jump down the spiral chute which runs from the packing room above stairs to the freight department on the ground floor.

"Our yeast," said Mr. Warner, "goes to the customer untouched and unhandled."

I can attest to the truth of this statement, having watched the journey of the yeast from the great vats down to the rolling and cutting process, then on to the drying and packing, and know that no hand touched it to sully or soil its snowy whiteness.

"Our yeast business," said Mr. Warner, "is but six years old; yet, so successful has it been that we already control the yeast trade of the country. We are now making arrangements to place on the market 'Warner's Safe Baking Powder.' We have been experimenting in this line for several years, have employed the best chemists in this country and abroad, especially Germany, and have succeeded in perfecting a baking powder which is as far in advance of the powders now upon the market as our 'Safe Remedies' are above the vile imitations and substitutes which are offered in their stead."

"But isn't the present demand for baking powder pretty well supplied?"

"True, there are many baking powders, some good, others bad; but the truth is the public will always buy a superior and meritorious article. They want and will have the latest improvements and discoveries in baking powders, as in all other lines, and we are preparing to give it to them. We have produced a scientific preparation, a new discovery in baking powder, which will sell on its merits."

"That will soon prove an additional source of revenue to your company?"

"Yes; the baking powder business is very profitable. One company in this country, I am told, makes a profit of a million dollars a year."

"This business is now an English corporation, is it not, Mr. Warner?"

"Yes; it was capitalized in London two years ago last fall for $3,395,000."

"Was the result of the capitalization an increase in the volume of business and a corresponding increase in profit?"

"The success of the business since its capitalization has been enormous. The first year's trading, after providing for the 6 per cent. on the debentures, resulted in a return to the shareholders of a dividend of 8 per cent. on the preferred stock, and 17 1-2 per cent. on the common stock, besides placing to reserve $218,250 and carrying forward to next year's account $62,419. For the second year 6 per cent. was paid on the debentures, and dividends of 8 per cent. on the preferred stock and 17 1-2 per cent. on the common stock, besides the cancellation of $306,000 of debentures and the carrying forward to next year of $100,000 as undivided profit. Had the directors not thought it wise to cancel this large number of debentures a dividend of 35 1-2 per cent. could have been paid on the common stock, besides carrying forward $100,000 as undivided profit."

"This is a remarkable showing. A summarization of the figures you have just given me shows that the profits of the business during the past two years have been sufficient to enable the directors to pay back to the shareholders $756,000, besides paying interest on debentures amounting to over $68,000, retire and cancel over $300,000 of these debentures and place to reserve a fund of over $100,000. Mr. Warner, these figures are simply staggering."

"Yet they are all true, according to the statement of the chartered accountants and your own computations. They simply go to show the enormous popularity, both at home and abroad, of our preparations."

"And is the sale increasing?"

"Constantly. The aggregate for the five years ending July 31, 1890, was 13,807,156 bottles, giving an average yearly sale of 2,174,431 bottles, while the sale for the past year, ending July 31, 1891, aggregated 3,596,174 bottles, or over 30 per cent.

"The business at present seems to be in a most prosperous condition, but what is the outlook for the future?"

"Better than the past has been. Our business all over the world is constantly improving. This is especially so in Europe, where the branches show a steady increase in profit and a reduction in working expenses over previous years. During the past year a branch was opened in Switzerland, which has already given a satisfactory return for the money invested. As an evidence of how profitable our branches are I may tell you that the average yearly profit of our Australian house alone, since the capitalization of the business, has been sufficient to pay the whole of the debenture interest, as well as 8 per cent. per annum on the preferred stock. As the amount required to do this is something over $100,000 yearly, and the population of Australia is less than 3,000,000, it gives you a little idea of the popularity of 'Warner's Safe Cure' in that country."

"How about the European field? Do you not consider you have covered that thoroughly?"

"Not by any means. The best proprietary medicine country in Europe, France, we have not touched yet. In fact, outside of Great Britain, Germany, Austria, and Switzerland, we have done nothing, and the truth is we have only just got those countries nicely going. Arrangements are now being perfected to introduce our preparations into France and Belgium. The people of these two countries are frugal, and consequently rich, and their habits of life are such as to make our preparations especially valuable to them. I consider France, with its 40,000,000 of well-to-do people, as promising a field for our business as any country in the world."

"The condition of your business is certainly prosperous, and the outlook for the future is all that could be desired; but let me ask you, Mr. Warner, where is the stock of your company principally held?"

"Right here," replied the all-the-world-round medicine man, and he pointed to a large, fire-proof safe in his private office.

"But you certainly don't own all the stock?"

"No, but a very large proportion—something over $2,000,000 worth. The stock is scattered in small lots all over the world. We have shareholders in England, Ireland, Scotland, Germany, Austria, Italy, Switzerland, Australia—in fact, there is scarcely a civilized country in the world where one could not find some of the shares."

"But why so scattered?"

"For the best reason in the world, to advertise our preparations. In a shareholder of our company I recognize a most zealous advertiser of our business. Being naturally interested in large dividends, he talks the medicine among his friends, sounds its praises, increases the sales and his own profit. You can't buy such advertising at so much per line, yet it is the most valuable you can get and costs you nothing."

"Outside of your own immense holding are many shares in the hands of parties living in this country?"

"Yes, and the number is increasing daily. In our 'Safe Cure Almanac for 1892,' which I handed you as we came through the mailing department, you will find on page 24 a limited offer of stock, which is being rapidly subscribed for. There are people in this country who use our 'Remedies' who have but few opportunities to invest their earnings in a live industrial enterprise where they will be safe and at the same time afford them an assured and high rate of interest, and it is for the purpose of providing such people with an investment of this character, as well as to advertise the business, that the offer in the almanac is made."

"I see that you only offer 4,000 shares of preferred stock, at $50 each, and 2,000 shares of common stock, at $75 each, and that you limit the subscriptions to ten shares of each kind of stock to each person."

"Yes; the limitation is made for the purpose of getting as wide a distribution of stock as possible for the limited number of shares offered, so as to reap the greatest good for advertising purposes, as I have just explained to you."

"How and where can the shares be obtained? Oh! I see; of the Central Trust company, 54 Wall street, New York."

"Yes, application for the shares can be made to the Central Trust company, who issue certificates representing both classes of stock. That company will also pay the dividends every six months, as soon as possible after they have been declared by the board of directors in London, which is not done, however, until the books and business have been thoroughly examined and accounts audited by chartered English accountants; such dividends usually being paid in April and October of each year."

Taking one of the almanacs with me, which, I am informed, are sent free and prepaid to all who desire them, I thanked Mr. Warner for his courtesy and wended my way to Powers' hotel. What I had seen and heard had so impressed me that I could get neither the man nor his methods out of my mind. That a business of such gigantic proportions, covering, as it does, with its offices and laboratories, the four quarters of the globe, and showing an annual earning power of nearly 20 per cent. on its entire capital, should have been built up by one man in the short space of twelve years is a monument to the ability, energy and sound business sagacity of its founder, and calls for a combination of rare qualities such as is seldom found in any single individual.

STIMULATE THE BLOOD.

Brandreth's Pills are the great blood purifier. They are a purgative and blood tonic, they act equally on the bowels, the kidneys, and the skin, thus cleansing the system by the natural outlet of the body—they may be called the purgative sudorific and diuretic medicine. They stimulate the blood so as to enable nature to throw off all morbid humors, and cure disease no matter by what name it may be called. One or two of them taken every night will prove an infallible remedy.

Sold in every drug and medicine store, either plain or sugar coated.

A CHECKERED CAREER.

Jeremiah Green, who died recently in Patankunk, Ulster county, aged 83, was the pioneer distiller of wintergreen oil in this country. He made a comfortable fortune in this business and became a temperance lecturer. He bought a large tract of land, which he intended to convert into an immense ground for holding temperance camp-meetings. In 1849 he succeeded in gathering together 3,000 people at his first meeting, but after nearly a week's labor with them, and only succeeding in inducing 140 to sign the pledge, he gave up the temperance business, sold his land, and became a sporting man, keeping fast horses, gamecocks and fighting dogs. When he entered sporting life he also became a politician, and soon had an influence in the county that was as extraordinary as it was inexplicable to the leaders of both parties.—New York Sun.

THE STORMY PETRELS.

The recent severe ocean storms have killed many of the ocean birds known as stormy petrels. Along the coast they may be found dead, and many have been picked up and brought here by coasting schooners. Some of these are capped petrels, whose only home is the islands of San Domingo and Guadaloupe. It is supposed they were driven north, and before being able to get back perished from cold or the change of food. The breeding places of these tireless birds are holes dug into the earth. The introduction of the opossum into the islands has resulted in the killing of both young and old of the capped species.—Philadelphia Record.

"JOHN ANDERSON, MY JOE."

In the Scotch ballad, was about to totter down the declivity of life with his aged wife. How it would have smoothed the rough places for the respected John and his venerable spouse could they have eased their growing infirmities with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, that benign help to the aged, the weak and those recovering but slowly from exhausting diseases. When the lamp of life is on the wane man specially requires medicinal aid, a sustaining tonic, a wholesome corrective. The aged and feeble are particularly susceptible to influences which produce disease, convalescence is too often interrupted by a relapse. This standard American invigorant is eminently adapted to the needs of such persons, and it always "fills the bill." Dyspepsia, constipation, rheumatism, kidney troubles and la grippe are among the troubles that it overcomes.

ENTERTAINMENTS.

The Charity Ball at Wheeler's Wednesday.

One of the Best Specialty Companies on the Road at the People's —Notes.

The Charity Ball, which Daniel Frohman's company will bring to the Wheeler opera house next Wednesday evening, has been one of the most notable plays in the history of the American drama, from the amount of money it has earned for its authors and manager, and from the singularly unanimous approval it has won from the best of the critics in all the large cities of the country.

It is a faithful picture of the life of today in fashionable New York, and its story is so strong and so well told that it never fails to arouse and hold the interests of all classes of people that see it. In fact it is one of the strong points of The Charity Ball, that although it is essentially a play of high life, it draws to the theater the patrons of all parts of the house. Sale of seats opened to-day.

Great Specialty Company.

The Boston Howard Anthenaeum company will open at the People's theater to-night for a week's engagement. The Cincinnati Enquirer speaks of this company as follows:

"That show is a 'corker,' and don't you forget it," was remarked by one of the audience at the close of the performance at Havlin's yesterday, and the remark about expressed the verdict of all who attended the entertainment. The act of little Edna Bertoldi alone would have been worth the price of admission. She is a young miss not yet out of her teens, with a trim figure and a pretty face. Her performance is a marvelous one. It is a contortion act, but of entirely new features, and combined with feats of equilibrium bordering on the marvelous. Her work is done in so easy and modest a manner that it gains the admiration of all. She is a wonder and will be the talk of the town.

Another great act is that of Kara, a juggler superior to any ever seen here. We confess to a lack of love for juggling acts such as are usually seen on the stage of today, but Kara caught us, and all the old-timers present were unanimous in the opinion that he is the superior of all his predecessors in this line of work.

The best female team on the novelty stage, Janet Melville and Evie Stetson, met with a rousing reception, and responded to a half dozen encores. They introduced new songs, but, of course, gave their dialect imitations, for which they are famous. Falke and Semons—new faces here—proved a success in their musical act, introducing much new and clever business. All the other acts were well received. The Evans, in a comedy sketch; Fulgora, in character changes; the Allisons, in song and dance; A. O. Duncan, in his ventriloquisms; Golden and Quigg, Irish comedians, and the Braatz Bros. in their head-to-head balancing. It was a fine show throughout.

Notes.

Another large house greeted Salvini Saturday night when he presented Dumas' great play, The Three Guardsmen. It was a splendid production from beginning to end.

Miss Susie Kirwin, of the Wilbur Opera company received a telegram Saturday announcing the death of her father at Philadelphia and stating that her mother is dying. She at once left the company and started for home.

AT THEIR FIRST MEETING.

She had an unfamiliar name, and raised
Her eyes she deemed a stranger's eyes to meet,
But sudden with a rapture rare and sweet
Her bosom filled and thrilled. For as she gazed—
That one brief moment—thro' her brain, half dazed
Passed wondrous visions, shadowy, incomplete,
Of things unknown, yet known. Images fleet
Of whatsoever rapturous joy had raised
In bosoms long grown cold, wherein had glowed
The life that now warmed hers; caught from the bliss
Of hearts that throbbed at love's first timid kiss,
The happy calm with wedlock that abode,
E'en from the mother-thrill that waked above
The infant's sleeping face. And this was love!
—Katherine B. Coutts in Travelers Record.

SHE MARRIED A CIVILIAN.

The orderly sergeant finished calling the roll, slipped the list of names under the button of his blouse, opened a second bit of paper and read:

"Sergt. Higgins, with Privates Abrams, Evans, Larsen and Stone, will report at 10 o'clock to-morrow morning, armed and mounted, to escort the commanding officer and his family to Fort Warner."

Morning broke dark and gloomy. There was promise of snow in the dense gray clouds of the west. There was a promise of rain in the unsteady wind from the south.

At 10 o'clock the colonel stepped in an ambulance up there by the door of the commanding officer's quarters and told the driver to go ahead.

He was a very proud old man, with a record that had grown brighter in battle. He was cold and imperious and commanding—as an officer should be.

Ahead of the ambulance rode the two servants of the commanding officer. Behind came the escort.

The dance at Fort Warner that night will be long remembered. Lieut. Gay was the lion of the evening. He had just come back from a brush with the Piutes, and all reports united in covering him with glory.

He was quick, incisive, pompous. He knew a great many things, and he told all about them.

He was so like her father, Dorothy Lane did not like him. Why will we love in one man the traits that make us hate another?

Lieut. Gay was captivated by the colonel's daughter. Maybe he thought the alliance would help him in an official way. He overstepped the bounds of prudence, and boasted to a group of superior officers as they stood in a corner of the ball room while the waltzers flitted by.

"Don't anticipate too much, Gay," said a captain, bantering. "She looks higher than you."

"She couldn't," said the lion, calmly. Then he added with a vain man's rising voice: "Dorothy Lane will marry the lieutenant."

A couple just whirling past caught the boasting, and the lady dropped from her companion's arm. Turning suddenly upon the group of officers, the subject of comment said swiftly:

"You overrate yourself, sir. I will not marry the lieutenant."

Any other man would have been crushed. He simply ignored her, and returned to continue the gossip. But the other officers, annoyed at his ill taste, had quitted the corner, and the lion of the evening had to hunt up worshipers.

Next day he asked permission to accompany the escort back to Camp Bidwell. He was provided with a mount. At 1 o'clock the little cavalcade marched out of Warner.

The clouds in the north had thrown out a skirmish line of snow. The wind in the east was heavy with rain.

In an hour the front wheels chucked down in a gully and the ambulence stopped. The commanding officer, lying there almost on his back, opened his eyes and swore.

"We are lost, sir," said the sergeant, from one side.

"The ambulance is broken," said the lieutenant from the other.

"We must stay here all night," growled the colonel; and then he cursed the teamster, and the dance, and the snow storm, and the comfortless couch in the ambulence.

At midnight some one aroused him by shouting:

"It is the Piutes!"

He sprang from his blankets. The snow had ceased. The rain had ended. The cold moon was shining. There was a bitter fight at the door of the ambulance. The horses had been stabbed. Their picket rope was broken, and they were galloping aimlessly about. He caught one, mounted and hurried away.

Some one was swinging a sabre down there by the wrecked ambulance. He had cut an open space, and was pushing the fight, slashing, running forward, retreating, darting to the right, springing to the left. It was carte point and right cut, tierce, and left swing; in quarte and down sweep.

That was Private Larsen. In the hour of need he took command.

"Fetch up three horses!" he shouted; and the sergeant came leading two of them.

Larsen pulled a woman from the ambulance and set her upon one of them.

Mount the others and bring them along," he commanded. Then he sent the sabre home with a clang, picked up a carbine and darted away, leading the horse with its clinging rider.

As daylight he saw a horseman skulking in the rocks. He did not like him, and he fired one shot as a challenge.

It was the recreant Lieut. Gay—the lion of the ball yesterday, pitiful coward this morning.

That evening as the men stood in line to answer roll call, the orderly sergeant announced a promotion. Private Larsen was made corporal by order of the commanding officer.

He was made a sergeant two weeks later, when one non-commissioned man was discharged and another insubordinate, made a proper opening.

As spring approached the commanding officer was taken sick of a fever. Lieut. Gay undertook to attend him, but he annoyed the colonel.

On Sunday inspection the officer of the day pushed his scrutiny into a little cupboard at the head of Sergeant Larsen's bunk and found it full of volumes.

"Who reads this?" asked the major, holding up a volume of Faust.

"I read them," replied young Larsen.

"How did you come into the army—in the ranks?"

"Went broke, got discouraged; enlisted rather than beg or be dependent. Money came from home next day. It was too late."

"Why didn't you desert?" The familiarity of the man had dropped to the banter of comradeship. "No—no; I know that. You couldn't do a dishonorable thing—like that. Will you come up to the colonel's house this afternoon and read to him?"

It was a pleasant hour for the man. It was rest and recreation for the colonel. Dorothy sat beside the window and listened to him. He had selected a book of alternating sketches and poems. They were easy to listen to. They were pleasant to remember.

"That man is a good soldier," said the major. "He is brave and full of resources."

"If he has education enough he might stand examination for promotion to a lieutenantcy if he has been in the army long enough."

"He couldn't as long as I am an officer," said Lieut. Gay. "He shot at me that morning after the Piutes jumped us."

"If I had had my way he would have hit you," cried the commanding officer. "You are a miserable coward, Gay."

The commanding officer had seen long service. He had an uncommon hold on the men who had graduated from the army into the halls of congress. He went to Washington with a mission as soon as the summer brought him healing.

Sergt. Larsen was ordered to appear before a board and pass examination. He acquitted himself so well—in mathematics, in history, in tactics, in language—that at the end they asked him questions with deference.

It was Lieut. Larsen—by order of the secretary of war, approved by the president.

Then came the climax.

Larsen asked for Dorothy's hand in marriage.

The colonel commanding refused him in rage; berated him for a presuming ingrate, and ordered him out of his house. Then he returned to his old admiration for Lieut. Gay. This puffing up a private soldier always was bad. It made him forget his origin.

Gay amused the colonel by playing cards. The stakes were trivial.

It was against regulation to gamble. But there was a game over there in the dark room above the store, where the major and the captain and the lieutenant found something more than pastime.

The colonel knew of it, and did not forbid it. Then he went over and looked on. Then the old passion for play, which had slept since the tedious days before Vicksburg, came back; and he took a hand just for that once.

He felt temptation tugging at him, and he prayed for an order, for an Indian uprising, for a plague, to keep him from yielding.

One evening he tapped at the dark-room door. The subdued noise within was hushed to silence. A second knock, and they opened the door. He sat down by the other three, and they dealt him a hand.

"No, I only wanted to look on," he said. "I am not going to play any more, and I am going to order it—"

At 11 he owed more than his pay would amount to in a year.

Another light knock came at the door. Another silence followed it. A second knock and the major responded.

It was Lieut. Larsen. He was in citizen's clothes.

"If you have no objection I will join you," he said, smiling.

"You should be gentleman enough not to come where you are not wanted," said the older lieutenant.

"You should be man enough to know you are violating orders. No lawless man can stand on a pedestal above another. Deal me a hand."

The colonel sat back. He was out of the game—dazed, bewildered, almost unbalanced.

Larsen won in one hand what Gay had been an hour in winning.

Presently Gay had three again, and he made it costly to play. Larsen drew two cards with him and bet $1.

Gay raised the limit, and was raised in turn. He was mad beyond the point of prudence. He touched the limit again, only to see the insolent Larsen imitate him.

Gay had four queens and an ace. Larsen had four kings and vanquished him.

Gay had no more money; so he lost his watch. It was Larsen's deal. The elder lieutenant picked up a full hand.

"I can't play it," he cried in frantic exasperation. "I have no more money."

"Put up your coat," said the younger lieutenant, calmly.

"It's a show-down," he said, and spread out three nines and a pair.

Gay walked home in his shirt sleeves.

Early in the morning he went to the adjutant's office and prepared charges. He was willing to abase himself in punishing that upstart.

After he had labored an hour, the post adjutant handed him a paper. It was Larsen's resignation. And it had been accepted.

At the reception which followed Dorothy's wedding, Lieut. Gay appeared. It was his last night in Bidwell. He had been transferred to Fort Fetterman.

"It was a very dark day for the poor fellows in the army," said he, bowing above the hand of the bride. "But you remember you told me one time that you would never marry a lieutenant."

"I haven't," replied the girl, her flashing eyes lighted with the memory of that night at Warner. "My husband is a free citizen of this country—and a nobleman at home."—Albany Sunday Press.

HUNTING THE WILD BOAR.

The Favorite Sport of the Hohenzollerns.

While gemsboc or chamois stalking appears to be the favorite sport of the rulers of Austro-Hungary and of Saxony, that of Emperor William and the house of Hohenzollern is wild-boar hunting. This species of game abounds in the imperial preserves of Koenigs-Wusterhausen, of Letzlingen, of Goehrde, and of Springe, the latter quite near to the ancient city of Hamelin, celebrated in legendary lore for its "pied piper" and for its rats. The preserves at Goehrde are, however, those most affected by the young monarch, as they were also by his grandfather, the late Emperor William. Persons invited for the first time to these imperial shooting parties have to go through a regular form of initiation, somewhat akin to that practiced in the case of people "crossing the line" for the first time at sea. On the evening before the day on which the hunt is to begin, and when the party are assembled in the smoking and card rooms of the Jagdschloss after dinner, the great oak table in the dining-room is cleared and ornamented with several lines of chalk. The Grand Huntsman von Kotze, or his deputy, Count Falkenstein, thereupon, after receiving the emperor's final instructions, selects a dozen members of the party and conducts them to the dining-room, where they take up their places around the table, each armed with a wooden spoon of different size. At a given signal the huntsman in charge of the imperial pack of blood-hounds, who has been stationed at the entrance leading into the dining-room, sounds the view halloo on his horn, and immediately every one of the wooden spoons is rubbed up and down the oaken table in a manner that produces a sound similar to that of the noise made by a pack in full pursuit. The person about to be initiated is thereupon seized and blind-folded, after which the doors are thrown open, and he is carried into the dining room, and laid upon the table athwart the chalk lines. The emperor draws his short hunting knife, and after making several mystic passes with it in the air, strikes the prostrate body of the neophyte a smart blow with the flat of the broad blade. The huntsman toots forth the signal of "dead, dead," which is used to call the pack off the quarry, and the new fledged "wardman" is permitted to struggle off the table and on to the ground. I may add that the emperor's blow with the hunting-knife is not the only one which the neophyte receives while stretched on the table, nor does it constitute the sum total of the initiation, but only the conclusion thereof. Indeed, there is sometimes a good deal of rough horse-play on these occasions, in which the emperor, who delights therein, takes a prominent part.

The boar hunts on the following day partake of the nature of the chamois drives, the only difference being that the drivers, or "treibers," are assisted in their work by a carefully trained pack of boar-hounds, which are accustomed to obey the horn signals of the huntsman in charge, and are of much service in driving the quarry from its lair in the dense bush and underwood. Another difference is that the shooting party instead of firing in the direction of the drivers are under strict orders to fire away from them. That is, one is practically forced to wait until the wild-boar rushes past before one's rifle may be levelled. Of course it sometimes happens that the boar, instead of charging past, charges directly at one in the most fierce and aggressive manner, and it is for the sake of being prepared for an assault of this kind that each member of the party is provided with a small pike or lance, which goes by the euphonious name of a "sowpen."

The costume worn on these occasions is an exceptionally hideous uniform, specially invented and devised by the present emperor. It consists of a double-breasted frock-coat of gray cloth, with grass-green lapels and collar, green striped pantaloons, with high boots, and a gray Tyrolese hat with a wide, green band. Any person who ventures to assert that the emperor looks well therein is guilty of a reckless disregard for the truth and of the basest flattery. For the gray coat and hat, and especially the green facings, cuffs, collar, and hat band, only serve to intensify the bilious tint of the emperor's complexion.—Harper's Weekly.

MASONRY IN FRANCE.

Attempts to Eclipse the Church in a Bridal Ceremonial.

French Free Masons are making more progress than ever in their efforts to eclipse the church in the matter of matrimonial ceremonies, says a Paris letter. The most pompous wedding that has ever taken place according to the new Masonic ritual has occurred in the Grand Orient lodge of the rue Cadet. A young man belonging to the brotherhood had been married by the mayor to the lady of his choice. The members of the lodge accordingly assembled yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and after having effected due and formal cognizance of the official marriage certificate, resolved to regard the bride as a sister. The ceremony took place on a platform hung with drapery and decorated with a raised bust of the republic, surrounded by eight tricolors and plenty of flowers. Watching events were many Masons, with their wives and families, the bride and bridegroom being in another room, while behind a screen were a dozen or so of musicians, who performed at intervals. The real ceremony began by the solemn entry of the members of the lodge of Vrais Experts, with their swords and banners. These gentlemen formed the "Arch of Steel" with their weapons, and a speech was made by M. Lepelletier, a journalist, who cast ridicule on religious rites and superstitions, and affirmed that these would be supplanted by the new Masonic ritual. He concluded his discourse with the cry, "Vive la Republique!" and the organ pealed forth the strains of the Wedding March, as the bride and bridegroom, with their followers, entered the hall and took their seats on the platform. The presumably happy man wore his Masonic apron, the lady being attired in the conventional white satin, with orange blossoms. When everybody had sat down, the "Venerable" made a speech on the advantages of civil marriage and the law of divorce, a peculiar mixture of subjects, which must have given the bride and bridegroom some food for reflection. The "Grand Architect" next threw over the pair a nuptial sash as a token of their union, hung a masonic emblem around the neck of the lady, and gave the bridegroom the wedding ring, which the latter placed on the bride's finger. The "Celebrant" now showed the wedded pair a glass ring, which he broke on the ground as a symbol of the fragility of badly assorted matrimonial matches. The ceremonies did not end here, for all the Masons marched up and deposited their insignia on a table before the couple; a glass of wine was given to the bridegroom, and one of water to the lady; a chain of union was formed by the brethren, and also another "Arch of Steel," the wedding presents were bestowed, and finally more speeches were made. The rites were not concluded until 5 o'clock.

A TRUTH FROM "TRUTH."

The New York Central is really first-class in all its appointments. Think of it, it has four tracks laid with the heaviest of steel rails in the most substantial manner, and when you are sleeping or lounging around in one of their superb Wagner cars, and flying along at the rate of nearly a mile a minute, as some of their fast expresses do, you will hardly realize that you are moving, so excellent is the permanent way. A short time ago a special train made the run from New York to Buffalo at the rate of a mile a minute the entire distance.

A few Plush Jackets left that must be sold. See them at LAMSONS'.

Protecting Fruit Trees in Winter.

In bulletin No. 16 of the Missouri experiment station (Columbia), the following account is given as an experiment in covering peach trees to protect the fruit buds from injury during the winter:

Four trees, three years old, were selected for this trial. Alternate trees were left unprotected.

The trees selected were treated as follows: The main branches were shortened one-third their length, drawn together closely and fastened with strong twine. The earth was removed from the roots on the side opposite to that the tree was to be inclined. Each tree was then drawn carefully over until it lay prostrate on the ground where it was securely fastened with twine tied to stakes driven into the ground. Sufficient earth was thrown over the exposed roots to protect them from the weather. The whole tree was then covered with straw to the depth of about one inch, which was kept in place by twine. Two of the trees were so covered that they could be opened.

The trees when uncovered in the spring showed the buds on the trees not opened to be a little in advance of those on the tree regularly opened; but, when compared with the buds on trees not protected, the unprotected buds were more advanced than any of those covered.

The effect of covering as shown by the reading of the thermometers: For February—The maximum temperature higher outside and the minimum lower, while the maximum temperature of tree No. 2 was higher than tree No. 1. The minimum was slightly lower. The lowest minimum temperature of tree No. 2 was 3 degrees higher than the outside and 2 degrees higher than tree No. 1.

For March: The sum of the outside maximum temperature was less than the sum of the maximum temperature of tree No. 1 or No. 2, while that of No. 2 was more than No. 1 the same as in February. The reason for the seeming contradiction of the outside temperatures for February and March, when compared with that of No. 1 and 2, may be explained by the greater number of cloudy and stormy days in March, and also that the average daily temperature for March was 1.05 degrees colder than the average for February.

For April: The sum of the outside maximum temperatures exceeds either that of No. 1 or No. 2, showing a greater difference in temperature as the season advanced. No. 2 was higher than No. 1. The sum of the minimum temperatures outside was greater than No. 1 or No. 2, while No. 1 was higher than No. 2.

The effect of covering trees as shown by this experiment is: First. Trees covered during cold weather are subject to less variation of temperature than when unprotected.

Second—In cold weather the trees are warmer, and in warm weather are colder than the outside atmosphere, and for the reason that the difference between the fruit buds being killed or uninjured is often a question of but a few degrees of temperature, the subject of covering the trees to protect the fruit buds is an important one and worthy of careful study.

Third—No perceptible injury was done to the trees or crop in laying the trees down. They blossomed as full, held and ripened their fruit and made as healthy a growth as the other trees.

The cost of labor required to cover a peach tree of average size should not exceed 10 to 15 cents; to this must be added the cost of material used for covering.

Shakespeare will please excuse us if we modify him thus: Thrice is he clad who hath his system strengthened with Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and he but naked though arrayed in furs, whose blood is poor or with disease corrupted. An incomparable medicine!

OLD "PAM'S" MANOEUVER.

In reading the other day, in the columns of The Recorder, the complaints uttered by a well-known statesman now in office about the manner in which his life was made a burden to him by senators and congressmen pestering him for favors for their proteges, I was reminded of the method adopted by Lord Palmerston to dispose of applications of this character.

Old "Pam" was a past master in the art of getting out of granting favors without offending the applicants.

On one occasion a certain politician was anxious to obtain a consulate for a friend. He applied to Lord Palmerston, who was then in charge of the foreign office.

"Too happy to oblige you," said Lord Palmerston; "call on me at Downing street to-morrow and I will see what can be done."

At the interview of the following day he proposed a consulate in Asia Minor, worth about $3,000 a year. The politician was delighted and thanked the foreign secretary most effusively. When taking his leave, Lord Palmerston called out after him:

"Then I will have the papers sent for you to sign."

"What papers?" demanded the surprised politician.

"Why, don't you know," replied Lord Palmerston, "that whoever recommends a consul has to sign a guarantee that he will be responsible for all the money which passes through the consul's hands?"

This remark ended the question. There was no more trouble about the consulate. For the politician was not going to make himself responsible for a man whom he well knew to be an inveterate gambler, a fact which was no secret to Lord Palmerston.

If some such practice as this were adopted at the various government departments at Washington and the senators and congressmen were required to furnish financial guarantees for all the candidates for office whom they recommend to the heads of the various departments, the latter would have far less of their time taken up in seeking to distribute a limited amount of patronage among an altogether unlimited number of candidates.—Marquise de Fontenoy, in the New York Recorder.
